LOUISIANA NOT BEACHED.

Visit to the Battleship Shows That She Sustained No Serious Injury.

Quick Action of the Commander and the Crew Averted More Than Temporary Damage.

A visit by a DAILY NEWS representative to battleship Louisiana Wednesday afternoon disclosed the fact that the vessel's troubles were not so great as had been reported ashore and were devoid of the sensational features which had been sent out in NEWS despatches. The NEWS man met Captain Potts on the deck of the ship and from him learned the details. He said that at the time he was in command, but later in the day he had turned his charge over to the executive, Lieutenant Commander R. W. McNeely, in compliance with the orders of retirement as the result of the action of the plucking board.

Repairs were being made to the valve of the 6-inch auxiliary outboard discharge when the valve bonnet blew off. At once a large stream of water spouted into the starboard engine room. Captain Potts at once went to the engine room, upon receiving the report of the accident, and found that the engineer force was doing its duty in attempting to stanuch the flow. The men were wrapping the damaged valve with mattresses and trying to bind on these wrappings tight enough to stop the flow, but this intake is 26 feet below the water line and the water pressure is pretty strong at that depth.

Captain Potts says he at once returned to the deck and proceeded to give precautionary orders. Collision quarters were ordered for the crew, and this meant the closing of all water-tight bulkheads, while the collision mat was put out over the side and pulled around into place. In the meantime the anchor was raised and the ship was taken in from 20 fathoms of water to a place where it was but seven fathoms, or 42 feet deep. The ship was drawing 28 feet, so that with 14 feet of water under her keel she was far from beached, as reports sent out stated.

The captain stated that as a precautionary measure she had been taken into shoal water, where it was quieter and the divers could work to better advantage. He said it had been reported to him that a story had been sent abroad that the ship had been beached, and this was positively not so. He "had not beached anything yet and certainly did not propose to do so now that he was retiring."

The pumps, he said, did not at first handle the inrush of water, which spouted like a big geyser, but later they were able to take care of all she was making. With the collision mat over and outside the strain on the inside was relieved, and the mattresses were lashed on, and divers went down and closed the outside opening to the main 20-inch discharge. This done, it was but a simple matter to repair the broken valve and at 5 o'clock preparations were in order to pull the Louisiana out to her anchorage again. While at anchor the ships do not keep up full fires, and she was unprepared to work her main engines, so that it was necessary to have the tugs move her.

The little water which she took in was readily cleared and the damage done was nothing. When the break came the crew were engaged in cleaning ship after coaling the day before, and there were quantities of stores on deck to be stowed away for the southern cruise. This cleaning up was necessarily postponed, hence her departure up the bay was delayed until she can be put in presentable condition.

ACCIDENT AT POSTOFFICE.

Man Standing at Front Window Injured When Automobile Smashes Glass.

By a peculiar automobile accident in front of the postoffice this noon, Bart E. Trains, a violin player in the Casino orchestra, who was writing a postal at the desk by the front window, was severely cut by broken glass and received harmful injuries. An automobile belonging to John E. Campbell and driven by his sister, Miss Catherine Campbell, with a party stopped in front of the postoffice and after a few errands attempted to start again.

Miss Campbell found the engine stopped and attempted to crank it, and it is supposed that full speed was on at the time. The car suddenly leaped forward, Miss Campbell fortunately dodging it, and turning on the sidewalk went entirely through the heavy iron guard rail, and smashed the window in front of which the unfortunate man was standing.

The machine, which was an E. M. F. 30-horse-power touring car, was also badly damaged, the engine being put out of commission, and the hood and both headlights demolished. Miss Campbell had a narrow escape. The machine was towed to a garage for repairs.

A CONTRADICTION OR A COINCIDENCE?

To the Editor of the NEWS:

On Monday morning many people people stopped a moment to watch a man who was painting a decorative (?) sign. Across the top was a chain of short and long links. In the spaces allowed for the long links were the names "Washington," "Lincoln," "McKinley," "Roosevelt." Below the chain was the statement: "No power can break this chain."

Before noon on the same day one of the observers read this quotation from John Ruskin: "I believe the first test of a truly great man is his humility."

Ruskin is old-fashioned you say? So are Washington and Lincoln.

INQUEST INTO THE PECK SHOOTING.

Coroner Shepley this morning held an inquest into the cause of the death of Mrs. Claudiana C. Peck, who was shot Monday, June 23, and died at the Newport Hospital Thursday, June 26. He had the witnesses summoned and they appeared at the aldermanic chamber in the City Hall, where the coroner took their evidence, concluding about 11:30. He has yet to take some evidence at the Newport Hospital.

GETTYSBURG STILL ALIVE WITH ITS THOUSANDS.

Return Home of Some Shows Little Difference in Camp.

"Charge" of Survivors of Pickett's Forces an Event of Governors' Day.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., July 3.—Although thousands of veterans have left the uncertain joys of camp life behind and started for home, their going made little difference in the appearance of the battlefield camp today, for thousands of others were on hand to participate in the exercises of Governors' day. On both sides of Confederate avenue the tents were alive with veterans and the lines before the cook tents did not seem to the cooks to have lost an inch, although the number that has left is estimated at close to 10,000.

The veterans acted today like a lot of school boys, whose vacation is only a few days away. Long before sunrise they began parading the camp to the music of "The Streets of Cairo" played on fifes and drums. The paraders were hard workers and the band had powerful lungs and hands, for they kept it up until mess call.

Many of the men who expect to leave tomorrow paid their farewell calls today on those of the other army they have come to know. There was no doubt in the minds of those who saw that so far as these men who have gathered here are concerned, the war has ceased to be a source of hatred and rancor.

One of the events of today was the "charge" of the survivors of Pickett's division on the "bloody angle," held by the remnants of the Philadelphia brigade. Under a hot sun the men in gray marched across the field that has not seen anything more like than a black snake in 50 years, up to the walls that form the angle. The "enemy" in Blue was waiting with weapons ready, and when they met across the wall they shook hands. Afterwards they looked over the ground for the site for a $250,000 monument they hope to have Congress erect there.

Governors' day called for speeches from State Executives Tener of Pennsylvania, McCreary of Kentucky and Sulzer of New York. Arrivals late yesterday for this event were Governors Haines of Maine, Fletcher of Vermont and Folker of New Hampshire.

Provision has been made on the platform with the generals and governors for Vice President Marshall and the big Congressional delegation from Washington.

AFTER THEIR HUNGER STRIKE.

Three Officials of Suffragette Organization Re-Arrested.

LONDON, July 3.—The police today re-arrested three of the officials of the Women's Social and Political Union, the militant suffragette organization, who had been released on license June 21, owing to ill health resultant on their "hunger strike" in jail. They are Miss Annie Kenney, Mrs. Rachel Barrett and Miss Harriet Kerr, who had been recuperating at a watering place.

Miss Laura Lennox, another suffragette leader, who was released on license on the same day as her comrades, and re-arrested a few days ago, was again today released from jail, where she had made herself ill by a "hunger strike."

TWO CHURCH FUNERALS.

Services for Chief Machinist's Mate Walsh and Captain Benjamin Nichols.

This morning at 9 o'clock the funeral of Chief Machinist's Mate Michael Walsh, U. S. N., took place at St. Mary's Church, where a high mass of requiem was sung by Father Tierney. The body was escorted from his late home on Spring street to the church by the Training Station Band and bugle corps and two squads of 24 apprentice seamen. When the procession reached the church the squads stood at present arms, while eight sailor boys bore the casket, which was draped with a large American flag, into the edifice. Besides these body bearers, there were four honorary bearers, navy friends, as follows: Mr. Carl Witt and Mr. Ragsdale of the Hancock, Mr. J. Johnson of the Connecticut and Mr. James Kane of this city.

The deceased was a member of the Knights of Columbus and six representatives of the local organization also acted as honorary pall bearers—Messrs. Louis J. Barry, William H. Tobin, Mortimer A. Sullivan, Joseph Menzies, Henry A. Martin and Joseph Le Page.

At the end of the service the squads formed in line and escorted the body as far as the Mile Corner, where the naval escort stopped. A firing squad of eight men accompanied the funeral by carriage to St. Columba's cemetery, where the interment took place. A large open carriage carried many beautiful floral offerings which friends had sent.

The funeral of Captain Benjamin Nichols took place from the First Baptist John Clarke Memorial Church Wednesday afternoon, where a large number of friends gathered. The service was of an impressive nature. The choir of the church sang several hymns, with a duet and quartet, "Some Day the Silver Chord will break." Rev. Arthur Crane, the pastor, spoke from the text, "Or ever the silver chord be loosed," from the twelfth chapter of Ecclesiastes, giving a summary of the life of Captain Nichols, in which he said there was much of the excitement, some of the pleasures and some of the love of life. The body was taken to Fall River for burial, accompanied by his two daughters, Mrs. George Fisher and Mrs. G. W. Ralston.

PROGRAM FOR THE FOURTH.

Arrangements for Its Observance by City Committee and Others.

No Parade, But Sports, Boat Races, Band Concerts and Fireworks in Plenty.

Tomorrow, the Fourth of July, a legal holiday, will be observed by a general suspension of business, the closing of city and public offices, a program of sports, bell ringing, salutes, fireworks and band concerts arranged by the city committee, and the usual holiday activities. There will be no procession, the Artillery having decided not to make a parade, as the new uniforms are not quite right and there is a desire that the contractors shall make them so without any complications which might arise by their use before they are accepted.

At the forts and naval stations the day will be observed as a holiday, the civilian employes doing no work and the soldiers and sailors only that which is necessary, with shorter hours and special programs of sports.

In addition to the sports on the city program there will be a base ball game between the Trojans and the Lisbons of Providence and a yacht race at Jamestown under the direction of the Narragansett Bay Yacht Racing Association.

The postoffice will observe its usual holiday hours.

The committee of the Board of Aldermen today gave out the following as the program for the city celebration:

6 to 6:30—Bell ringing.
10 to 11—Sports for children on King Homestead park.
10 to 12—Band concert on King Homestead park.
10—Boat races, cat and power boats, in the harbor.
12—National salute.
12 to 12:30—Bell ringing.
2 to 4:30—Sports at Morton park.
2 to 4:30—Band concert at Morton park.
5—Cutter race for apprentice seamen.
6 to 6:30—Bell ringing.
8—Fireworks at city lot, near beach.
8—Band concert with fireworks.
9 to 10—Band concerts at King and Battery parks.
9:15 to 11—Band concert at Touro park.

The sports in the morning will be for children and under the playground management. The sports at Morton Park will be five events for local athletes and a similar list for the army and navy men. The cutter race will start south of the Training Station and finish off the end of Long wharf.

The catboat and power boat races will start at 10 off the flagpole on the Torpedo Station, the starting gun for motors being at 10:05 and for cats at 10:10. Catboats will be started in one class and may be measured at the Newport Yacht Club house up to 9 a. m. Power boats should take their time the same as last year, by running over the course once or twice or more, and reporting their times to the regatta committee before the race.

The course for motor boats will be from the start, a line drawn east from the flagstaff on the Torpedo Station, around St. Patrick's buoy, around the buoy southeast of Rose Island, around he south end of Goat Island, including the buoy, to the start, four times around, 10¼ miles. Owners are advised to time boats when the south side of Long wharf, the steamboat dock, is just abreast. The course for cats will be one of the regular club courses. Three boats must start to make it a race.

This race is part of the city's celebration and is open to all cat and power boats of Newportors. Entries may be made at the Newport Yacht Club up to 9 o'clock with William M. Arnold, who will be there to measure the cats. Three boats must start in either class to make a race. The cats will start in one class, one-gun start. Courses will be given out by the regatta committee of the Newport Yacht Club, which will handle the race for the city committee.

In the afternoon there will be a race by the boats of the Narragansett Bay Yacht Racing Association, which will be down this way for two days, there being a race at Jamestown on Saturday. The preparatory gun will be at 2, the warning gun at 2:10 and the start for class N at 2:15. Thereafter the time between classes will be three minutes and between divisions five minutes.

The visiting yachtsmen will be entertained by members of the Newport Yacht Club at the clubhouse on the evening of the Fourth, when the local men will have open house and will try to make it pleasant for the visitors.

The fireworks will be in the usual place, on the slope facing the beach. It will mean a tough time for the police, keeping the road clear.

The band concerts at King Homestead park in the morning takes the place of the proposed patriotic concert.

Mrs. John Wadsworth has returned from the hospital in Fall River, where she went for another operation, but was found to be in too poor health to sustain it.

STRONTIUM IN FIREWORKS.

Strontium is apparently one of the minerals which the United States neither produces nor imports in any large quantities, according to J. M. Hill, of the United States Geological Survey. In 1911only $44 worth of strontium salts were imported, and this supply seems to have been sufficient for two years.

Strontium nitrate, however, was probably imported, as there was little apparent diminution in the manufacture of fireworks, in spite of "safe and sane" Fourths throughout the country, and in this industry strontium salts are used to produce "red fire." The salts most commonly used by the makers of pyrotechnics are grouped with a large number of chemicals "not otherwise provided for" by the tariff schedules, so that no record of the imports of any special compound is possible.

the nation may go on that political parties are born and pass away. It would be unnatural if another new party were not now born. The life of a political party is about 30 years, and now we have the Progressive party, led by as great a man as ever led a political party. In the last 10 or 15 years political lines have been broken. One party was in power, but as it did not do what the people desired, the people voted against it. The Democrats have come into power, promising all sorts of things, but nobody knows how they will carry out these promises.

Both parties have done what they could in a great jumble of expediencies, but merely to win for their side and give offices to their followers. They have not done what the people desire and there is a demand for a new party, with clear distinctive policies. The people demand business peace, settled business conditions. Neither party has made its tariff bills on business principles, except as it fosters one side and makes it difficult for the other. The Progressive party proposes to handle the tariff as an economic, not as a political, matter. The Republican and the Democratic policy is for the present; the Progressive party proposes to settle the tariff once for all.

The first principle of the Progressive party is nationality. The party looks to the constitution of the country to find power to do what is good to be done for the people's welfare, while the Republican and Democratic parties look to the constitution to find the limitations. We look to the fundamental law to find out how we can do it; they look to the law to find out how they can get out of doing it.

A purer and broader democracy is the second principle. It is the trust of the people and we believe they all should vote. We see no reason why some of us should have political liberties because we were born men, while others have none.

The last principle is humanity in leigislation. Mr. Beveridge spoke intensely regarding the child labor laws, and demanded a strict national law, instead of state laws, which vary in many ways.

Mr. Walker.

Following Senator Beveridge, the remaining course of the dinner not being distributed, Joseph Walker of Massachusetts was introduced and spoke in part as follows:

This great Progressive movement is not the growth of a day nor of a year. It has been gaining strength and making headway for years. It is not confined to any one section of the country. It is nation-wide. It has, at last, culminated in the formation of the Progressive party. A new party was bound to arise sooner or later. It is now here and here to stay. It is here to stay because it has a mission to perform.

The Progressive movement is a protest against political conditions, as they have developed in this country. The Progressive party offers the remedy. It would free our politics from the domination of private and special interests, acting through the boss, the machine and the lobby.

The Progressive party would not abolish representative government, but would subject representatives to the control of the people. It would not destroy the constitution, nor jeopardize those "natural, essential and unalienable rights," which the constitution is designed to protect.

The Progressive party believes that the rights and the interests of the individual are safer in the hands of the majority of the American people than in the hands of an interested minority. It would give new life and meaning to the doctrine embodied in the Declaration of Independence that "governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." The Progressive party, therefore, would so change our machinery of government that the deliberate will of the majority may, at all times, find expression in establishing and amending constitutions, in the selection of representatives and in the enactment of laws.

My friends, the American people will not long tolerate a party which denies the fundamental principle of free government. When I speak of the American people, I speak of American women as well as of American men. The Progressive party stands for the enfranchisement of women. As men and women together have made the home what it is, as men and women together have made the church what it is; so men and women together must make the state, if the state is to be what it ought to be.

The Progressive movement is a protest against social and industrial conditions as they have developed in this country, and again the Progressive party offers the remedy in its social welfare program. It would protect children that they may develop into normal, healthy men and women; it would thus guard the citizenship of the future; it would provide by law for the health and safety of operatives in our mills and factories; it would prevent occupational disease and danger; it would limit the hours of labor, especially the hours of labor for women and children; it would provide a minimum wage to the end that men, women and especially young girls may live in decency and in honor; it would lift the burden of industrial accident from the shoulders of the individual toiler who happens to be injured, and, by a proper workmen's compensation act, place it on the broader shoulders, first, of the industry, but ultimately of the community; it conceives industrial accident as a necessary element in the cost of production; it would sustain old age and unemployment. In short, it would check the strong and protect the weak in the cruel struggle for existence. Fraternalism is the dominating spirit of Progressivism.

The Progressives, therefore, would protect and encourage legitimate business in every possible way. Much of the social welfare program of the Progressive party is restrictive in its nature and places a burden upon our industries. It sets a high industrial standard. Therefore, the Progressives must stand and do stand for a reasonable protective tariff. To the end that such tariff be reasonable and not excessive, fair and not favorable to special interests, the Progressive party stands for a genuine, independent, expert tariff commission.

The Progressives have no quarrel with business whether it be big business or little business, so long as it be honest business conducted by proper methods. We would, therefore, not destroy big business nor tax it out of existence, but we would regulate and control it, and we would control it by a power co-extensive with the business itself, viz., by the national government. Above all we would see to it that our great natural resources are conserved for the benefit of all the people, and not monopolized and exploited for the benefit of a few.

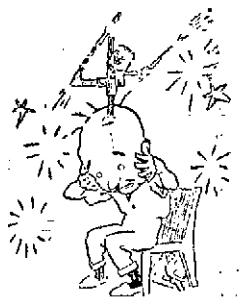

No business is good for a community which is not self-supporting; that is, which does not pay, at least, a living wage and which does not assure to its employes reasonable hours of labor and healthy, safe working conditions. Anything less than this breeds dis-

ONLY PRACTICABLE ASSESSMENT.

Valuation Claimed Not to be Excessive But Rather the Opposite.

Defense in Jamestown Tax Case Opened After a Non-Suit is Refused.

Judge Stearns presided in the superior court Tuesday afternoon, and the Jamestown Caswell tax case proceeded.

Walter S. Barker, teamer and contractor, testified as to the roads on the plat. He had worked on them. They are turnpike roads. There were streets signs on all these roads. Some of them are not walled or fenced. Mr. Levy went into many details. Witness insisted that one of them has gutters and there is no large rock in the middle of the road. There is a line of poles in the middle of one of the "highways."

Plaintiff rested, the jury was sent out and Mr. Levy moved a non-suit. He claimed that plaintiff had not made such a return as the law requires, because she had not made oath as to the valuation and she has no remedy unless the law is complied with.

The court looked over her statement and asked what is the matter with it. It is on a blank furnished by the town and is the town to object to its own form? The court held the paper to be right, Mr. Levy being allowed an exception.

Then he had another point—there is no evidence that it was practicable to assess in any way other than the one followed. There is no evidence of excessive valuation. The law presumes the assessment proper until it is proved to be otherwise. The court denied the motion, noted an exception and said: "Bring in the jury."

Mr. Levy opened the defense, claiming that it would not have been practicable to assess otherwise, and that the valuation is not excessive, but is an under-valuation.

Amos Peckham was the first witness for the town. He has lived there 36 years; has known the Bryer farm 26 years; has lived on a part of it 19 years. He has bought five or six portions of it; bought, one time, 40,000 feet, 26 years ago. He was not allowed to tell what he paid for it. He next bought 25 years ago. He made three or four sales.

The court said it could not be asked what was paid for any particular pieces of land, other than those taxed in this case. An expert should testify as to the value of the land. Judge Burke said one man is a poor buyer; another buys cheap. Land in Newport has been sold below its taxed value, but the assessors merely say: "You bought cheap; you know it is worth more."

The high sheriff appeared with a stock of palm leaf fans, and while the argument proceeded each juryman was busy with one of the palm leaves.

Mr. Levy insisted that sales were evidence, and read law to sustain his contention. The court said 12 years ago is too remote; he thought the proper way is to qualify an expert.

Mr. Peckham then was asked questions to qualify him as an expert on land values. Shoreby Hill is a residential section, with estates worth $6,000 to $10,000. In his opinion the land assessed against Mrs. Caswell September 20, 1912, was worth $80,000. The assessors assessed it at $50,000. They consider 30,000 feet a house lot and assessed such in this vicinity [illegible] $1,000. Some of Mrs. Caswell's land is worth more than this; some of it was not worth half of that. He thought her land would sell for $80,000. By a vote of the board of assessors it was decided to assess her land at $50,000, which is about $1,250 an acre, for the whole of it.

Then there was another legal battle, Judge Burke insisting that a sale of real estate is likely to be influenced by personal considerations of seller and buyer and that the decision he quoted, against admitting such as evidence, is good law and common sense. The court told Mr. Levy to frame his next question, and while that was pending, a recess was taken, during which, the court having retired, and the jury, the legal battle was continued on the floor.

The court came back and said to the jury: "Take your coats right off, gentlemen." He added: "I'm not going to keep you much longer; it's too hot." He said he would hear one more witness.

Mr Levy called James Tausig, a lawyer, a resident on Shoreby Hill until last year. He knows some of the property. Is a director of the company owning Shoreby Hill. He has made sales of this land, the last about 60 days ago, of unimproved land. Asked what the price was, Judge Burke again objected and the court read from "Cyc" that in some states it is admitted, in some not. There is no question that the courts are hopelessly divided. Rhode Island admits it some times.

This land was 1,500 feet away. The court suggested asking the opinion of witness as an expert. Mr. Levy said the witness has not been on the Bryer land and on account of his age it was desired not to ask more questions than necessary. The court wished more evidence as to the Shoreby Hill land, and asked Mr. Tausig a question. His answers were all difficult to catch and as to this one the court decided to exclude it.

He referred to another sale last autumn, just across the road from the Bryer land. Judge Burke said Shoreby Hill is laid out by a landscape artist, with restrictions, and there is nothing like it in Jamestown. The court said that then he should exclude the evidence. Mr. Tausig explained the facts and again the court said: "I shall exclude that." Other land he was allowed to state that he valued at $500 an acre. He has sold it for that recently.

At 4:30 the court ordered a halt and adjourned to 9:30 a. m. Thursday.

MIDDLETOWN.

[Regular correspondence of the News.]

The young son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sherman of Green End avenue, who was injured early in the week, is doing well. Mr. Sherman had his boy behind him on a motorcycle, and the wind blew off the child's hat. As Mr. Sherman tried to catch it the machine swerved and flung the boy off, cutting a bad place on his head. He was in poor condition for one day and it was feared that his skull was injured, but he is now coming out of his trouble well.

Mrs. Charles H. Ward is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Joseph E. Farnum, in Providence.

Mrs. C. Louise Perry of Worcester, Mass., is visiting relatives in town.

The entrance to one of the Charity farms at the foot of Honyman hill has been closed, owing to the unsafe condition of the roadway. When the sides of the road were cleared, a year ago this spring, the culvert at this point was not replaced, there being a question as to whose business it was to attend to the matter. The entrance, while being constantly used, remained unbuilt until recently, when it became too dangerous to use.

Cheese Biscuits.

Rub two ounces of butter into six ounces of flour, add three ounces of grated cheese, seasoning of salt, pepper and red pepper, and make into a stiff paste with a little beaten egg. Roll out thinly, and cut into small fancy shaped biscuits. Lay on a tin and bake in a moderate oven till yellow. These biscuits keep, and may be re-heated in the oven for use.

Currant Shortcake.

Many prefer this to strawberry shortcake. After stringing and washing, the currants are crushed, sweetened and spread between the layers and over the top. On this is heaped a well sweetened meringue, which is lightly browned in the oven. For acid fruit, whipped cream or a soft custard is preferable.

Chicken Pudding, Southern Style.

Singe and clean two small chickens and joint as for fricassee. Put in a saucepan, add just enough boiling water to cover and one scant teaspoonful salt. Put at the side of the fire, simmer gently for an hour, then take out the chicken and set the broth aside. Make a smooth batter with one quart of flour, one teaspoonful salt, one quart of milk and six well beaten eggs. Grease a deep earthen dish and put in the batter and chicken in layers, having the first and last layers batter, and seasoning the chicken well. Bake in a moderate oven from 45 minutes to an hour, according to the thickness of the pudding. When almost done re-heat the broth and season rather highly; draw [illegible] to the fire and [illegible] beaten yolks of two eggs mixed with two tablespoonfuls of cream; take from the fire as soon as it thickens, and serve with the pudding.

Harlequin Sandwiches.

Take two slices of whitebread and one slice of whole wheat bread. Cut out with a round cutter. Spread one round of white bread with a little butter, then with cream cheese mashed and mixed with finely chopped olives. Butter the round of brownbread and spread with finely chopped nut meats mixed with mayonnaise dressing. Butter the other round of whitebread. Arrange with the brown round in the centre, press all firmly together by putting a plate and weight on the top; when ready to serve, cut in tiny wedges like layer cake.

THE PATRIOT.

[Life.]

He blew a small fortune in crackers and poppers
And got up at dawn on the Fourth of July;
From the bottles of chaos he drew all the stoppers
And thoughtlessly shot his best friend in the eye.

He blew down a house with the fall of a rocket,
He murdered a cow with a .44 gun,
A pack of red devils went off in his pocket.
(The burns caused him pain, but of course it was fun.)

He shot off a cannon next door to a cottage
Where lay a pale invalid—noise made his worse.
He filled an old shotgun with Lucifer's pottage
And put his lame aunt in the hands of a nurse.

He strewed his track with destruction and hunting;
The fire engines hustled wherever he went
As he reveled in arson like Baal gone a-hunting
Till money and powder and frenzy were spent.

And when he retired from his labors unnerving,
A scholarly person inquired, passing by,
"Pray, what great event is the nation observing,
Causing such havoc on Fourth of July?"

The dangerous patriot hummed "Yankee Doodle,"
Then cried, "What a question! Say, ain't you the worst?
To ask what it's for never entered my noodle—
Guess it's the birthday of William R. Hearst."

FANCIES.

Sing Ho! the Fourth! the glorious Fourth!
That fills all hearts with joy.
And bids the sage, though bent with age,
Be once again a boy!

Sing Oh! the Fourth! the noisy Fourth!
That bangs, explodes and shoots,
And celebrates in fifty states
With horrid shrieks and toots!

Sing Ah! the Fourth! the bloody Fourth!
That seems like war, not peace,
And maims and scars for manhood years—
When will the slaughter cease?
—[Life.

July the Fourth will soon be here;
We'll join with great urbanity,
Forgetting warfare as we cheer
For safety and for sanity.

Fair Customer—Yes, I know; but it has stretched horribly.—[Boston Transcript.

"The Declaration of Independence is a wonderful document," said the patriotic citizen.

"Yes," replied the legal expert. "It's one of the ablest documents I ever saw. And the most remarkable thing is that with all the ability it represents, nobody appears to have received a cent for drawing it up."—[Washington Star.

The portly lady had accidentally taken a rear seat in a tramcar reserved for smokers. With unconcealed indignation she watched the man beside her fill his pipe.

"Sir," finally came her frigid tones, "smoking always make me fell sick."

"Do it now, ma'am?" said the man, as he carefully lighted up; "then take my advice an' chuck it!"—[Tit-Bits.

MIDDLETOWN PROBATE NOTICES.

Probate Clerk's Office, Middletown, R. I., June 24, A. D. 1913.

Estate of William T. Bull, Junior.

Frank L. Hinckley, the Guardian of the estate of William T. Bull, Junior, minor, has this day filed in this Office, his petition in writing to the Court of Probate of said Middletown, representing, that his said ward is seized and possessed of certain real estate, situate in said Middletown, being a one quarter interest in that lot or parcel of land containing six and 53-1000 (6.053) acres, situated on the Northerly side of the Boulevard in said Town, and bounded and described as follows: Southerly, by said Boulevard; Westerly, by land of Pitt S. Littlefield 649.4 feet; Northerly, on land of the Heirs of William Bailey, 412.1 feet; and Easterly, on land of Henry S. Keeson, 630.3 feet, and being a parcel of land formerly belonging to the late Melville Bull, and praying that he may be authorized and empowered to sell the interest of said ward, in said real estate, for the purpose of making a better investment of the proceeds of such sale, and said petitioner has applied to me to give due notice of the filing and pendency of his said petition, according to law.

Notice is hereby given to all persons in any wise interested in said petition, that the same will be considered and acted upon, at the Court of Probate, to be held at the Town Hall in said Middletown, on Monday, the twenty-first day of July next, A. D. 1913, at one o'clock P. M.

ALBERT L. CHASE, Probate Clerk.

Probate Clerk's Office, Middletown, R. I., June 26, A. D. 1913.

A SENTENCE WELL SUSPENDED.

The police of New York and Philadelphia do not like the suspended sentences which judges are imposing. They say it is of no use to arrest criminals if they are not punished, but if the suspended sentence prevents the occasion for arresting them again the police ought to be reconciled to this new departure in the treatment of confessed or convicted criminals.

A country boy went to New York, felt that he needed more money than he was earning and stole a diamond from another person in his boarding-house. His guilt was clear enough, but he was only 16, and something might be forgiven to his immaturity; at any rate, it was a first offence, and there was the possibility so early in life that he might recover morally. The judge invited him to name his own sentence and the boy promptly named a suspended one. The judge accepted his suggestion, on the condition that he would leave New York, go back to his home in the country and report to the judge by letter.

In all probability there is a boy saved to society. Suppose he had been sent to prison for a year or two, or even to a reform school—there would have been a record which would have made him a great deal of trouble about obtaining employment. Then there would be the effect upon his mind. He would recognize himself as belonging to the criminal class, would feel that the police were down on him, would be discouraged about earning an honest living and his pride and self-respect would be gone. The chances are that after he left prison he would fail to secure employment, commit another crime and be arrested again.

He will go back to the country and keep out of temptation, and he has no prison record behind him. He has the confidence which the judge showed in him to encourage him. In all probability he will keep as straight as a string. He'll be more likely to resist another temptation than he would have been had he not yielded once and just escaped prison, though it is better that he should keep out of temptation by leaving New York and going back where diamonds are less accessible.

STUDYING OUT OF SCHOOL HOURS.

How much studying children should do outside of the schoolroom and school hours is a question on which all teachers do not agree, but on the contrary there is a wide range of opinion. Some assert that there should be no study at home in the evening, on the ground that this is injurious to a child or young person, aside from the belief that all which ought to be done by any pupil can be done in the regular school hours, or at least earlier than in the evening. On the other hand there are teachers who hold that no harm is done the average pupil by study outside the schoolroom and the regular hours, or even by a reasonable amount in the evening. These do not believe there is enough studying done in the schoolrooms or during the day to make it dangerous for a child physically or mentally to devote time to books in the evening. When teachers disagree on a matter so plainly within their sphere, who shall settle a question of this kind?

The real question of course is whether teachers should so arrange the curriculum as to make it necessary for pupils to work evenings at home. Voluntary study at home or at any time outside school hours can hardly be regulated by the teachers, but must be regulated by parents or guardians; compulsory study in the evening, by the giving of tasks which cannot be done within school hours, is a matter over which teachers have jurisdiction. Therefore the question is one for them or for the authorities who superintend their work. Whatever the belief of the teachers or the officials may be in this regard, it is true that in most instances the work is so arranged that few pupils can do it all in the schoolroom but must take some books home and study in the evening. It is this condition which has aroused the discussion, as it practically amounts to compulsory evening study by most pupils.

The argument of those who object to this is that they need all the sleep that they can have, to repair the exhaustion of body and brain during the day, and therefore they should not be subjected or allowed to subject themselves to any work which will prevent easy and natural rest. That evening study does excite a condition which interferes with good sleep is the further contention, and the conclusion of the argument is that it therefore should not be permitted, and particularly should not be made obligatory, either directly by positive orders or indirectly by arranging the work in such a way as to make it impossible for the average pupil to do it without evening study. There is undoubtedly a strong basis of sound sense in this, for too much excitement of the brain and too much mental stimulus before retiring is beyond question bad for the mind of a child and likely to make sleep difficult or impossible in many cases. It is proper, therefore, that care should be exercised to avoid any disturbing influence of that sort immediately or shortly before retiring.

Those who take the opposite view contend that the amount of studying required of the average child in the evening in order to prepare the lessons for the succeeding day is not enough greatly to excite the mental faculties and place them in a condition which will impair the virtue of sleep. This is doubtless supported by the facts in many cases, and yet it is difficult, if not impossible, to argue in the interest of all, except for such a condition as will make it unnecessary for any one to suffer. That means in this case that unless evening study is prohibited, or at least eliminated as compulsory, some may suffer, even though there may be many who will not. The fact is that all children are by no means alike in respect to mental capacity to accomplish tasks or strength to endure long periods of study. Hence it is impracticable to make rules which will be favorable to all unless they are of such a character as to make much study outside the schoolroom, or at least in the evening unnecessary.

TAXING OUT OPTION TRADING.

Southern Senators have secured the insertion in the tariff bill, by the finance committee, of a provision taxing sales of cotton for future delivery about 50 cents a bale, the tax to be refunded if the cotton is delivered. The use of the taxing power for other purposes than raising a revenue is open to serious objection, but it is too late perhaps to raise any point against it. It has already been applied to the circulating notes of state banks, to oleomargarine colored to look like butter, to matches made with white phosphorus and to opium.

If this tax should go into effect and stop option trading on the cotton exchanges, the results will not be satisfactory to the Southern planters. It would have prevented two bull movements in cotton in recent years which put many millions—possibly hundreds of millions—of dollars in the pockets of the planters. There have been bear operations in the cotton markets, but they are short-lived or rare. The two great manipulations of the market in recent years have been corners, based upon a short production, but for a time driving the price some cents a pound above what it would have been.

The elimination of speculative buying on the exchanges would drive the greater part of the buyers out of the cotton market. Certainly that would not raise the price of cotton. A few professionals will at times sell "short" but hardly any outsiders do that. The business of speculation in all markets is largely sustained by outsiders who trade through brokers, and at least ten to one of these outsiders who tempt fate in cotton, pork or grain are buyers. They think the commodity will rise, and buy to sell again at a higher figure, and their buying sends the price up. The representatives of the Southern planters would drive all these out of the cotton market, and leave only a few speculative buyers who have capital enough to buy for cash, and the mill owners who will only buy as they need the fibre. The result cannot send prices up; it can hardly fail to weaken prices by withdrawing a great buying element.

There is another break in the ranks of the Democratic Senators over the tariff bill. Hitchcock of Nebraska, anticipating action of the caucus which would prevent an individual member from offering any amendment in the Senate, withdrew that he might be in a position to make a fight in the Senate for his tobacco trust amendment, to levy a graduated tax on the product of tobacco companies. The amendment failed to secure the approval of the caucus by a vote of 18 to 23. Senator Hitchcock says he does not propose to bolt the party or oppose the tariff bill, but will make an earnest effort to put his amendment in the law. Though the closeness of the vote presages considerable support for Senator Hitchcock, the managers of the bill do not propose to allow the consideration of any proposition which is not approved by the finance committee and will adopt machine methods to carry out their purposes.

The stories concerning the crowds at the Progressive celebration, sent out of the city and published in some newspapers, were largely at variance with the truth. There were not nearly so many people here as some had been encouraged to expect, and hundreds rather than thousands in attendance is more nearly in accordance with the facts. Whatever it may have been called, it was a Roosevelt day and the ex-President was the one whom the majority came to hear and see.

A Chicago clergyman denounces the marriage fee as "graft, not by one smarting under the necessity of paying it, but by one accustomed to receiving it." He says in explanation of this statement that since the church insists that marriage is a church rite it should make it free to all. "The minister who does not need a fee should be ashamed to take it, while if he really needs such help it is the turn of the church to be ashamed and promptly to raise his salary."

Newport is now ready for the celebration of the Fourth of July. The Progressive jubilee at the beach has whetted the appetites of the people for the Fourth, and next week comes the circus.

Newport survived the excessive heat without prostrations or serious accident. Many a summer passes without such extreme heat here.

THE "PLAIN PEOPLE."

Wilson's Interpretation of Hamiltonian Theory Not Always Agreed With.

[Truth.]

President Wilson says Alexander Hamilton was a great man, but not a great American, because "Hamilton believed that the only people who could understand government, and therefore the only people who were qualified to conduct it, were the men who had the biggest financial stake in the commercial and industrial enterprises of the country."

We cannot agree with Mr. Wilson in his interpretation of the Hamiltonian theory. The essence of Mr. Hamilton's belief was that the best government must have at its head the ablest and most far-seeing men, and the ablest and most far-seeing men were naturally those who had won their spurs in life's battle, wherever they had been called to serve.

He did not, as Mr. Wilson would have us believe, teach the doctrine that the only success qualifying a man for the conduct of government was financial success. He included financial success, of course; but it was brains and enterprise and initiative and the power of leadership he had in mind first of all, whether those qualities were found in the industrial and commercial world, or in any other department of human usefulness.

The President bases his criticism on a false premise—the idea that Alexander Hamilton believed that only men with a big financial stake in the community were fit to govern. As a matter of fact, such an idea was never held by any great statesman, much less by Alexander Hamilton; and it is an idea that the large stakeholders in question would be among the first to repudiate.

Would Mr. Wilson go so far as to believe that all men are equally qualified to govern? Or would he go so far as to contend that the great majority of people in this country, the hewers of wood and drawers of water in private life, have any qualifications at all for the great responsibilities and exacting duties of government?

We hear a lot of twaddle these days about the "plain people," both from Mr. Wilson and others less earnest. But in the final analysis, those referred to as the "plain people" are people of an inferior order of intelligence, or who lack some quality essential to success. They are the failures. Who wants to intrust the great problems of government to men who haven't the brains or the initiative or the industry to rise above the lowest round in the ladder of every-day life?

The President cites Abraham Lincoln as proof of his theory that "the masses" are as capable of conducting the affairs of government as are the leaders in industry and commerce. But he couldn't have picked out a less convincing example. Lincoln was born as one of the masses, but he very early in life raised himself above the crowd and proved his capacity for leadership. Moreover, he was a great lawyer, and undoubtedly might have become a wealthy man had he cared to devote his great talents to the accumulation of money.

It is a fallacy to say that the "masses" are capable of conducting the affairs of government. They are capable of governing only through representatives of a higher order of intelligence, and they are capable of selecting these representatives simply because they know their superiors—the men who do their thinking for them in the ordinary affairs of life. No man would ask the advice of one of the masses in a matter of great personal importance, or think of employing him to conduct his private business. Why should he be depended upon to solve the greater problems of government?

CELEBRATION NECESSARY.

Man Seems to Require Noise, While Great Nature is Mostly Quiescent.

[Helen Coale Crew, in Lippincott's.]

It is a matter of some astonishment that man is the noisy creature that he is, when for generations so much has been accomplished by nature before his eyes with so little sound or fury. It is true that Niagara speaks with deafening roar and the thunder reverberates loudly, but these are exceptions to the general rule. And when town meetings are held, or revivals, or a President is elected, or a new century ushered in, or our country's birthday celebrated, as now, there is noise enough to drown Niagara, and the thundering of the heavens is a mere whisper in comparison.

But see how nature goes about her creative work, as important—perhaps—as the making of a country. April comes; and suddenly, by an utterly silent conquest, winter is routed and the naked earth covered by a myriad grass blades. It would require patience and a mathematical head to compute the enormous energy expended in pushing up that huge green army every spring. It is a magnificent accomplishments. But is there a sound of trumpets? Or any hand clapping? Or fireworks? An acorn sprouts, and through the voiceless work of a successive century a mighty oak is reared, inch by inch, carrying its leaf-crowned head high in air, symbol of strength and majesty. But not a shout! Not a single hallo! Every day since the world began the sun has risen. The sleeping trees are tossed awake by invisible hands; the morning stillness barely broken by their wind murmurs. Out of the darkness has come a silver streak, a pearly gleam, a rosy glow, a crimson glory, a golden flame—the sun! the sun! is it unimportant, this daily uprising? Yet Nature stands as silent as a sphinx before the splendor of it.

The very making of a man, important as he is and thinks himself to be, is accomplished without noise. At his appearance his own newborn cry is the chief celebration of the event. That there is here a new marvel, a man-to-be, is not, apparently, a matter for any general shouting, unless he happen to be a part of that long-drawn-out celebration and self-gratulation known as royalty. In that case cannons and throats become hoarse with noisiness. But Nature has nothing to do with that! Without sound she made him, in the womb, her workshop. And when he has cried and laughed and shouted his noisy way through life and is at last awearied of his own blatancy, she carries him to the tomb, her other workshop, a place of vast silences. It is there she makes her grass blades.

However, our country's birthday has come. Let us make a joyful noise—or, at least, a noise! Let the cannons burst themselves and the trumpets split open! Let the children suffer, if need be! There are children a-plenty; let a few score or a few hundreds be maimed! Let us mark our nation's progress with little white milestones! Glorification must be maintained! We made this country, and everybody is going to know it!

UNACCOUNTABLE FASHIONS.

[New York Times.]

The Paris correspondent of the Times declares his belief that the fashions in women's dress this summer are the most audacious since the era of the Directoire. Women appear in the streets and parks and at the race tracks in low-cut bodices with short sleeves and [illegible] diaphanous skirts. The Directoire audacity is understandable. France had been having a debauch in the name of freedom, religion had been insulted, anarchy had just been quelled, and in the slow process of restoration of law and order old conventions had been nearly obliterated, morals were at a low ebb, and the social condition was exactly expressed in the dress of the women.

But that social condition surely does not exist now. In France, as in America, we have been led to believe, there has been a great moral awakening. Feminism is a moral force. Syndicalism surely does not tend to lax morality. The modern radical is, first of all, the foe of the vices engendered by wealth. Literature in France is becoming amazingly moral, the theatrical stage is lending a hand to the uplift. Some of the product may be distasteful, but we are assured that the intent is good.

Therefore fashions, to express the new sense of the alarming development of evil and the need of suppressing it, should become more formal and modest, not take on the aspect of the bacchanalia. There is no accounting for the extravagance of the prevailing Parisian mode.

A FALL OF THIRTY FEET.

William Littlefield, Injured at Torpedo Station, in Comfortable Condition.

William Littlefield, in the employ of Darling & Slade on the new storage building at the Torpedo Station, fell Wednesday afternoon and was quite seriously injured. A call was sent for the city ambulance. This was received at Curtis's stable with only four minutes in which to catch the boat at the Government Landing. The ambulance was hitched up in short order and reached the landing in time, crossing to the Torpedo Station to get the injured man. Littlefield had fallen from a ladder, a distance of about 30 feet, and was badly hurt about the back and side with several bruises and cuts on his face and head. He was unconscious until after he reached the hospital, but is now in a fairly comfortable condition, with little prospect of a serious or long-continued illness.

The quick work of those at the stable in getting the ambulance hitched up and at the landing in time to catch the boat saved a delay in bringing the injured man to the hospital, which might have been dangerous.

THE WEATHER.

BOSTON, July 3.—Forecast for Boston and vicinity—Fair and cooler tonight; Friday fair; moderate, easterly winds.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Forecast for southern New England—Fair tonight; cooler near coast; Friday fair, warmer in Connecticut and western Massachusetts; moderate, northeasterly to southeasterly winds.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Forecast for northern New England—Fair tonight and Friday; cooler tonight near the coast; warmer Friday in Vermont; moderate, variable winds, becoming southeasterly.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

Since Wednesday morning an area of moderately high barometeric pressure has moved southeastward over the Lake region and is now central over New York state, with highest reading, 30.32 inches, at Canton and Ogdensburg. Thence southeastward a ridge of pressure somewhat above normal extends to the eastern Gulf states. The northerly and easterly winds preceding this high reading have brought comfortably cooler weather to the northeastern portions of the country, although the temperature remains rather high in other districts east of the Mississippi river, having risen again in the upper Mississippi valley. Temperatures are near the normal in most portions of the Far West. Showers have occurred during the past 24 hours at a number of stations in New York state, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and northern Vermont. It is clear in these districts this morning as well as in the middle plains states and on the Atlantic slope. Unsettled and showery weather obtains in the middle and western Gulf states and in northwestern districts. The temperature in New York city at 8 a. m. was 78, Boston 75, Washington 76, Jacksonville 82, Chicago 78, Denver 64, San Francisco 56. The cool weather will continue in this vicinity during the next 36 hours, with moderate, easterly winds and no precipitation.

AN ORDINANCE in amendment of an ordinance granting to the Newport and Fall River Street Railway Company permission to locate railroad tracks to be used for cars in certain streets in the City of Newport, in addition to the existing location in said streets, heretofore granted.

It is ordained by the Representative Council of the City of Newport as follows:—

Section 1. In addition to the location heretofore granted by An Ordinance granting to the Newport Horse Railroad permission to locate railroad tracks to be used with passenger cars in certain streets in said City of Newport, and of this ordinance in amendment thereof and in addition thereto, permission is hereby granted to the said Newport and Fall River Street Railway Company to locate and extend its railroad tracks with suitable poles, fixtures and appurtenances in connection with its electric system of motor power, to be used as authorized by law, in the following street and highway of Newport, viz: On Bath Road from the focat on of its present switch or turnout on Bath Road between Freebody Street and Middleton Avenue, to extend a double line of tracks with suitable poles, wires and appurtenances, easterly along the southerly side of said Bath Road and within two feet of the curb stone, to Easton's Beach, said double tracks to take the place of the present turnouts or switches on Bath Road near Freebody Street and near Cliff Avenue, according to plans, now on file in the office of the City Clerk.

Section 2. The permission hereby granted is subject to the terms and conditions in said ordinance and the ordinance in amendment thereof and in addition thereto, still in force, affecting the present location of said railroad; and the said railroad shall, within sixty days after the passage of this ordinance, accept the same and shall within said time file the said acceptance with the City Clerk, otherwise this ordinance shall be null and void.

VERDICT FOR MRS. CASWELL.

Directed by the Court for the Amount of Tax Paid Under Protest.

Decision That the Assessment Was Illegal, Because Not Made on Separate Parcels.

The Caswell-Jamestown tax case proceeded this morning before Judge Stearns and the jury, in the superior court.

Assessor Peckham was recalled and told how the assessors sometimes differed and determined figures by a vote. They had no way of separating the different parts of the Caswell land to put a separate value on each.

To Judge Burke witness said the Caswell property was assessed as one parcel because there was but one title. No deed could be found. There was a plat and deed of each piece sold from the Caswell land; there was something to go by for these lots. They did not consider "that" (the blue print annexed to Mrs. Caswell's return to the assessors) a plat. Witness did think she swore to the plat. He denies that the plat was a part of the sworn statement.

Was it assessed for $50,000 in 1912? Witness thought so. Has it been assessed this year? Witness thought so. Has it been assessed for $63,000? Witness couldn't tell. How much was it assessed for in 1911? Witness did not remember. Wasn't it assessed for $40,000? Witness couldn't tell. Would you say it was not assessed for $28,000 in 1909? Witness could not tell. Hasn't it been your purpose to keep on increasing this valuation year by year? Not more than on any other property, said witness. Have you increased any other valuations on the Bryer plat, Mr. Levy made spirited objection, but the court ruled against him. Witness said: "I couldn't tell."

Did you increase your own taxes on your land on the Bryer plat, or on land of Thomas Carr Watson, who is president of the board of assessors? Witness thought not. Could he tell of increase on any other land on the Bryer plat than Mrs. Caswell's? "I cannot, standing here," said witness Witness said the board of assessors thought the Caswell land not taxed in proportion to land around it.

Charles E. Weeden and A. O'D. Taylor testified as experts on real estate, and L. B. Bates and Town Clerk Severance as to other matters.

Assessor Barber, six years on the board, and more familiar with values of buildings, took the stand. He considers $50,000 too low a valuation; he would say $70,000. Does not think any of the land is taxed enough. He would be wiling to pay $70,000 if he was buying land.

Witness cannot remember the previous assessments on the Caswell land. Don't you remember that Mrs. Caswell protested in 1911? Witness did not; he might if she had been the only one. Her assessment was increased in 1912. Were others on the Bryer plat increased? Ruled out; exception noted.

The only reason for assessing in one sum was that there was but one deed for the Caswell property; that is the rule of the assessors. Judge Burke asked how about property passing under wills, not recorded in Jamestown. After several questions witness finally said he supposed they could have assessed the land in separate parcels; he did not think the majority of the board would have agreed to do it. The blue print was there, but they paid no attention to it whatever. "She brought her return in, and you entirely ignored it?" asked Judge Burke. Witness said he did; others could speak for themselves.

The court ruled that evidence as to prices set by Mrs. Caswell would not be admitted. Mr. Levy then called Jeremiah H. Tefft, all his life of Jamestown, who testified as to purchases and sales of land.

Mr. Levy rested.

This closed the evidence and the jury being sent out Judge Burke moved that a verdict for plaintiff be directed, because the assessment was illegal. Two assessors have sworn that they could have assessed the tax in separate parcels and that plaintiff's statement was absolutely ignored. Some of her land is in lots absolutely cut off from other land.

The court asked Mr. Levy why the verdict should not be directed. Both lawyers fired off legal citations and the court looked them up. Mr. Levy contended that the question of practicability of separate assessment is a question of fact and should go to the jury. He argued that Mrs. Caswell knew what land was assessed, and that the blue print was not a plat on file in the town clerk's office. There is no evidence that Mrs. Caswell owns any other land, and her own plat mentions the Bryer farm. There was no levy, or threat to collect taxes, or suit brought. The property was not in jeopardy.

The judge said it is the practice to pay the tax under protest (as done in this case). Mr. Levy said the presumption is that the assessment was legal. There is no evidence to the contrary.

The court said the finding of a jury would not be conclusive at all. There is a question for the court and it has been held that the law is for the benefit of the taxpayer. The assessors assessed the individual byers of the lots sold from this plat. Some of the lots owned by Mrs. Caswell are entirely disconnected from her other land. One such lot is enough to settle the case. The assessors had no difficulty in assessing other separate owners. The law requires the owner to specify separate parcels; certainly the assessors should do so. The assessors had the sworn statement and the plat. The assessment is, in the judgment of the court, illegal and a verdict for plaintiff will be directed.

To save his rights, Mr. Levy then renewed his motion for a verdict for the town, which was over-ruled and his exception noted.

The jury being re-called, the court explained that the issue was a question of law and a verdict for plaintiff for $500, the amount of her check, was entered by direction of the court, no interest being allowed. The question of costs may come up later.

At 12:46 the court was adjourned to meet according to law.

STREET RAILWAY WORK.

Bowery Turnout Nearly Ready and Road Soon to be Open to the Cars.

Work is progressing rapidly on the street railway, both at the Bowery street turnout and at Morton and Carroll avenues. The turnout should be ready for use by this afternoon, or Friday morning, at the latest. The switches are in position, but the roadway has yet to be put in condition.

The track is all down on Morton and Carroll avenues and all that is left for the gang is to fill in. The line squad is now here, erecting posts, and will proceed to the wiring. The posts are all up on Carroll avenue and only a few remain to be put in place on Morton avenue. As soon as the wiring is completed, the road will be opened for the cars. This should be done by Friday morning.

THE LIBERTY BELL MYSTERY.

Reason For Famous Inscription Explained in Some Old Letters.

[Philadelphia Letter in New York Tribune.]

The great mystery of the Liberty Bell, the manner in which the famous inscription, "Proclaim Liberty Throughout All the Land Unto All the Inhabitants Thereof," came to be cast in the bell, and the reason for it, which has baffled the historian for half a century, has at last been solved. With the finding a few days ago of letters written by Isaac Morris, who was superintendent of the old State House when the bell was ordered in 1751, Wilfred Jordan, curator of Independence Hall, has been able to supply the long sought explanation.

According to the papers which have disclosed the secret, the inscription was placed on the bell in England when it was made, in 1751. The object was to dedicate the bell as a memorial on the fiftieth anniversary of the granting of the charter to the city of Philadelphia by William Penn. The words were suggested by Morris, who was a profound Biblical student, and they were taken from the tenth verse of the twenty-fifth chapter of Leviticus.

This intelligence is contained in letters addressed to members of the assembly by Morris when the plans for the bell were under consideration. It had been planned to celebrate the anniversary of the city's semi-centennial, and as the small bell used in the state house had proved insufficient, it was suggested that a mammoth memorial bell be made to replace it, which would be the largest in British America.

The bell is a copy of the famous "Big Ben," the largest of the bells in Westminster Abbey, London. The firm which cast the bell at Whitechapel, which at that time was outside the limits of the city of London, was that of Thomas Lester, which is still doing business.

One of the letters written by Morris states that when the bell was re-cast in this country to improve the sound, Pass and Stow, the machanics, made a better job of the inscription than the makers in London, the letters being more legible and more artistic.

The re-casting of the bell was made necessary because of a crack, which occurred within a year after its arrival in this country. The two colonists who were given the job of re-casting it added one and one-half ounces of copper to every pound of bell metal, which, they believed, would not only make the bell tougher, but add to its sound. The result, however, was to give the bell so muffled a tone as to render it unfit for use, and the two men who re-cast it were subjected to so much ridicule that they begged for permission to do the job over.

This was granted, and after the copper had been reduced to a lesser proportion the bell was replaced in the tower, finer than ever, where it hung until 90 years after it had been cracked the second time. This last break, which is the one now seen in the bell, occurred at the funeral of Chief Justice John Marshall, July 4, 1835, and not July 4, 1776, when the Declaration of Independence was proclaimed.

One of the letters written by Morris, dated March 10, 1753, after the bell had broken the first time, is in part as follows:

"It was cracked by the stroke of the clapper, without any other violence, as it was hung up to try the sound; though this was not very agreeable to us, we concluded to send it back to London by Captain Budden, but he could not take it aboard, upon which two ingenious workmen undertook to cast it here. I am just now informed that they have this day opened the mould and have got a good bell, which, I confess, pleases me very much that we should first venture upon and succeed in the greatest bell cast, for aught I know, in England or America. The mould was finished in a very masterly manner, and the letters, I am told, are better than on the old one."

LOCAL BRIEFS.

—Miss Ida Bliss arrived at "Quarterfoil" Wednesday evening.

—Mr. and Mrs. Henry White are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Fish Webster.

—Mrs. Henry T. Vaux is visiting her mother, Mrs. Crump, at the Morrell cottage.

—A number of Newporters went to New London today, to attend the funeral of Mrs. Gardner.

—Mr. Joshua M. Addeman, for many years Secretary of State of Rhode Island, Mrs. Addeman and Miss Mary F. Darrance of Providence are at the Nason cottage, Mill street.

—A steam launch from the Dixie found the sunken wharf off Almy's coal wharf at 12:30 this morning, and though the police relief boat manned by Officers Buckley and Hamilton tried to put her off there was no result until the tide rose.

—Battleship Alabama, with the Maryland and District of Columbia Naval Reserves on board on their annual cruise arrived this afternoon and anchored in the outer harbor. She will remain until Saturday and the Reserves will be given liberty during the Fourth.

LIKE OTHER CONVENTION CENTRES.

Progressive Conference at the Beach Has a Varying Attendance.

Excellent Addresses, With Little of Politics and No Attempt at Fireworks.

A huge crowd no longer expected, the gathering of Progressives today simmered down to just what is taking place in many centres which call themselves convention cities. The first birthday gathering of the party enthusiasts for a conference was held in the dance pavilion this morning, and lasted two hours and a half, during which time there were a number of excellent addresses and no attempt at fireworks. The speeches on the whole could not be called radical, only now and then statesmania being made which would be questioned by believers in any party.

When the gathering was called together there were perhaps half a hundred present, a few of whom were Newporters but the great majority strangers. If this is anything like other national conventions many of the "delegates" might be expected to be taking in the sights, as it is fair to presume that those who are here because of this so-called conference exceed the number gathered at the morning session. While the session was in progress people came and went, apparently just curious ones, and at times perhaps there were as many as 100 in the hall.

The calling of the meeting for 10 o'clock caused a little earlier life on the beach than usual, but otherwise there was nothing out of the ordinary.

It is the first convention for the beach, and so there were some happenings which experience will guard against. While one of the speakers was in the midst of his subject the excursionists began to arrive, and following the custom the big organ in the convention hall was started up. A hurried appeal to the management caused this noise to go out of action. All through the morning there was a noisy trucking along the board walk, taking supplies to the various booths, but this has never had a meeting to disturb before and was not thought of this time. Rubber-tired trucks may result. Fakers with Progressive matter were noisy on the board walk, but this was a matter up to the conference. The smaller hall was used because it afforded even more space than the conference could possibly fill, and at the same time allowed the convention hall to be used as the lunch pavilion which it is when not needed for a convention.

Gifford Pinchot called the gathering to order, presided and made the opening remarks, dwelling upon conservation as his theme. He said so much has been heard of conservation during the past two years because there was an awakening to the fact that it is the most fundamental of questions, because it is the question of the day and because it interests the whole people. Trusts, tariffs and currency are all dependent upon conservation. Trusts are but natural forces transformed by being centered in the control of a few, and thus the few secure a monopoly over many. Tariff, too, is based upon natural advantages, while currency means the distribution of natural resources with equal opportunity for all to secure their share, but a bad system may make this difficult.

The cost of living is dependent upon conservation and we are becoming more dependent upon the need of conservation every day. National neglect to conserve in time will mean a long period of trouble. We should realize what it means to it things go, for there will be a time when our resources will all be developed and then they will be controlled by a few. The old method of letting things go has now brought us to a threatening situation of which we should take notice. If we are to continue to be a successful nation we must conserve and stop the waste. We must prevent the privileged control of resources, for our whole future rests here.

Mrs. Edith Ellicott Smith spoke upon "The Conservation of Country Life" and of her personal experience as the operator of a farm in Pennsylvania. She declared that things are wrong in the rural districts politically. They are made so by the Republican and Democratic politicians, so that the voter there when asked to change his vote at once asks what he is to get for it. Things change slowly in rural districts, and while cities may break from the

MISS JESSIE WILSON ENGAGED.

President's Daughter to be Thirteenth White House Bride.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—President Wilson's declaration that the generally supposed, hoddoo "13" is his lucky number, and always has been was recalled for society today in connection with the announcement of the engagement of Miss Jessie Wilson, second daughter of President and Mrs. Wilson, to Francis B. Sayre of Lancaster, Pa. The influence of the President's lucky "13", it is believed, extends to the entire Wilson family, for Miss Wilson, engaged in 1912 and to marry in 1913, will be the "thirteenth" White House bride.

Mr. Sayre, who is at present an attorney in the office of District Attorney Whitman of New York, is 28 years old. He graduated from Williams College in 1903 and was manager of the football team there, valedictorian of his class and interested in Young Men's Christian Association work. He spent two summers with Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell in his missionary work on the coast of Labrador and studied law at Harvard Law School, where he graduated last year "cum laude".

Miss Wilson is 24 years old and was educated at Goucher College, Baltimore, and specialized in political science. She has done much settlement work in Philadelphia.

The first wedding in the White House was during the Madison administration when, in 1811, Miss Lucy Payne Washington became the wife of Judge Todd of Kentucky. Miss Washington was a sister of Mrs. Madison. In the following year Mrs. Madison gave up the White House for the wedding of a cousin, Miss Anna Todd.

Weddings followed after that in the Monroe and Adams administrations until President Jackson set the record for nuptials under official auspices. During his regime three weddings were solemnized.

The last wedding was that of Miss Alice Roosevelt to Representative Nicholas Longsworth of Ohio, in 1906.

The only President of the United States to be married in the White House was President Cleveland, who married Miss Frances Folsom there in 1886. The total to date is 12. Miss Wilson's wedding will be the thirteenth.

MEASURING A PLANT'S DRINK.

[Strand.]

When we cut flowers we put them in water to keep them fresh. Like human beings, they can exist for long periods on water alone, as the liquid forms a considerable portion of their bulk. The drinking capacities of plants vary a great deal, and at a recent scientific exhibition held at Surbiton, England, some ingenious devices were shown to register the different actions of plant life. The apparatus consist of a twin glass tube with a coiled formation at the base. The flower is placed through a cork into the water in the upper end of the branch tube, and the lower end, which is inserted in a vessel filled with water, is lifted out and replaced, thus allowing an air bubble to enter the tube. As the plant drinks the water the bubble is forced along the coiled glass as fresh water enters behind it, and the amount taken by the flower is, of course, the quantity behind the air globe.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

—Miss Ida E. Bliss arrived Wednesday at the Carter cottage, "Quarterfull," for the summer.

—Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Havemeyer have arrived at the Pinard cottages for the summer.

—Mr. and Mrs. George D. DeForest have arrived at the Train villa, which they have occupied for several seasons.

—Captain Hood, U. S. N., Captain Slicemaker, U. S. N., Mr. C. de Flores and Professor Henin have arrived at The Berkeley for the season.

—Mr. James J. Van Alen returned Wednesday evening from his fishing expedition in Canada and is at the Muenchinger-King for a short stay.

Williams gave a dinner at the Torpedo Station in honor of Rear Admiral N. C. Twining, U. S. N., chief of the bureau of ordnance, Navy Department, who is their guest.

FITZGERALD AND ECONOMY.

Chairman of Appropriations Committee Makes Plea Against Division.

A Classical-Looking President—"Innocent George" Chamberlain—A Republican Query.

[Washington correspondence of The News.]

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Looking toward economy, Chairman Fitzgerald of the appropriations committee made a plea for a return to the days when all the appropriations were made by one committee instead of being scattered among eight or ten. No doubt many millions would have been saved if the division had never been made.

The appropriations committee seeks to again become the great powerful organization it was before the division was made and would like to continue to dominate the House, as it did in the days gone by. But the House will not return to the old method. Members are lacking in control now, and they will not curtail the little power they still exercise, as members of committees, which make appropriations for various activities of the government.

The division of the appropriations was the result of an old feud between Sam Randall of Pennsylvania and William R. Morrison of Illinois. Randall was a protectionist, Morrison a free trader. Each was leader of a wing of the Democracy. Randall several times defeated Morrison's tariff bills. Morrison, with the aid of Carlisle, who succeeded Randall as Speaker, sought to humiliate Randall by taking away most of the appropriation bills from the appropriations committee, of which Randall was chairman. And Morrison was able to carry his scheme through.

And now the other committees—military affairs, naval affairs, Indian affairs, postoffices, rivers and harbors, agriculture and foreign affairs—are strong enough to hold several bills which they report and handle each year. Even the Senate followed the House after a hard fight and divided the appropriations among different committees.

It was a select audience which listened (o the address (he called it an address instead of message) delivered to Congress urging currency legislation. In the gallery were many women, the wives and daughters of Congressmen and their friends. As the President stood in front of the Speaker's desk, at the reading desk of the clerks, his tall, slim figure clad in the conventional frock coat and striped trousers, he fitted exactly the comment of a woman in the gallery. "Well, anyway, he is a classical looking President," she said. And even from the standpoint of the best dressed man in the assembly, Jim Ham Lewis, the President was certainly "classy" in his appearance.

Senator Chamberlain of Oregon is sometimes called "Innocent George," and here is one reason why: Recently he arose in the Senate and mildly, with child-like faith, asked unanimous consent to take up and consider a bill relating to Alaska. It was during the morning hour. The Senate was to take a recess in 15 minutes, and apparently the Oregon Senator had an urgent bill to pass.

But inquiry was made, the bill was read and developed that it was a measure authorizing the construction of railroads in Alaska, committing the government to ownership of railroads to that extent and appropriating about $30,000,000 for the work. Well, of course he didn't "get away with it," although all the people in the northwest section of the country want the legislation.

"Has President Wilson enough patronage to pass both a tariff bill and a currency measure?" asked former Senator Hunsbrough. He was a member of the Senate during the last Cleveland administration and remembers that patronage gave out when Cleveland was in the midst of tariff legislation.

The name Page seems to be prominent these days. First there is Walter H. Page, ambassador to Great Britain; then Thomas Nelson Page, ambassador to Italy; Logan Waller Page, who is doing the good roads work for the Department of Agriculture; Robert N. Page of North Carolina, a Congressman on the important committee of appropriations, not to forget Senator Carroll S. Page, Senator from Vermont, who keeps alive memories of maple sugar every year and who went up in a flying machine. "Turn down a Page," says some one. But you can't do it these days.

The day that President Wilson delivered his second address to Congress a traveled individual leaned over the gallery rail and saw the Senators march in. "Look at them in their light suits," he said in a pained voice. "They are not showing proper respect for the President. In a foreign parliament every man would be in black, even if he was sweltering."

SO DECEPTIVE.

Many Newport People Fail to Realize the Seriousness.

Backache is so deceptive.

It comes and goes—keeps you guessing.

Learn the cause—then cure it.

Possibly it's weak kidneys.

That's why Doan's Kidney Pills are so effective.

They're especially for weak or disordered kidneys.

Here's a Newport case.

Mrs. J. Shea, 108 Thames St., Newport, R. I., says: "I suffered from severe attacks of backache and my kidneys acted irregularly. I was more tired in the morning than when I went to bed at night. I was all run down and felt very nervous. I needed a good kidney tonic and found it in Doan's Kidney Pills. They relieved the pain and distress in my back and benefited my whole system. They fixed my kidneys up all right and after I used them I was better able to do my work. I give Doan's Kidney Pills all the credit for making me well."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

ALMOST INSTANTLY KILLED.

Samuel Stevens Sands Injured When Tire of Automobile Bursts.

The bursting of a tire on the wheel of his automobile resulted in the almost instant death of Samuel Stevens Sands, step-son of William K. Vanderbilt, at West Hampton, Long Island, Wednesday evening. In important features the accident was identical with that in which his younger brother, G. Winthrop Sands, was killed in France July 29, 1908.

Simultaneously with the bursting of the tire the automobile skidded to the side of the road, bounded upward and overturned. Mr. Sands was caught beneath the heavy mechanism and practically every bone in his body was broken. He was carried to the veranda of a cottage, where, with two physicians working over him, he recovered consciousness for a moment before he died.

Mr. Sands was 30 years old. Like all the other members of the Sands and Vanderbilt families, he was fond of motoring, and motoring meant fast driving to him. He left New York early in the afternoon in a 60-horsepower two-seated automobile, intending to reach his summer home at Southampton in time for dinner. No one accompanied him on the trip. Examination of the speedometer showed that at one time it had been making 77 miles an hour, but eye-witnesses of the accident insisted that Mr. Sands was not going more than 40 miles at the time the tire exploded.

Physicians found that a wheel spoke had imbedded itself in the victim's chest, and that his right lung had been punctured. His skull was fractured and most of the skin was torn from his face.

G. Winthrop Sands, the youngest brother, met his death in much the same manner. With a chauffeur he was motoring at high speed from Deauville to Paris. Near Poissy the tire on the same wheel of his automobile exploded, with the same results as in Wednesday's accident. The only difference was that the younger Sands, who was then 23 years old, was killed instantly. It is a curious fact that the father of the two, Samuel Stevens Sands, Sr., also died in an accident, having been thrown from his horse while hunting about 30 years ago. His widow became Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt.

Samuel Stevens Sands was not very active in the business world, but socially and in the realm of sport was a leading factor. He was a keen motorist and an almost equally keen horseman. In the summer of 1910 he married Miss Gertrude Sheldon, daughter of George R. Sheldon. The couple divided their time between their New York residence and their Long Island country place. Besides the widow Mr. Sands leaves one child about two years old.

SINGAPORE'S CHINESE THEATRE.

[Wide World Magazine.]

Outside the Fowery Kingdom the Chinese theatre best known to Europeans is probably that in the Chinese quarters at Singapore. Here tourists may witness a Chinese play performed just as it would be in Pekin or in any other Chinese city. Probably the piece has been running for a week and has not yet finished, as these plays often take a fortnight or even three weeks before the story is completed. At this theatre the plays are presented on a bare platform practically without scenery. The orchestra occupy seats at the back of the stage, immediately behind the actors, who, to a Western onlooker, appear to come on and walk off as they choose. There is no drop-curtain, and it is difficult to tell where one act ends and another begins. If a man is slain he merely lies down for a little while, and then jumps up and walks off. The setting, however, is to some extent indicated by the properties. An alter, for instance represents a temple; a crude bamboo rod, with a sign at its apex, a city; and a pile of chairs and tables, a mountain. An interesting fact about these theatres is that all female parts are played by the men, no women being allowed on the stage.

UNTOLD AGONY WITH PIMPLES

And Blackheads on Face. Kept Awake Nights. Itching and Pains. Disfigured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in Three Weeks.

1131 Salem St., Maldon, Mass.—"When I was about fifteen years old my face broke out with pimples and blackheads. My face was a mass of pimples and kept me awake nights it was so itchy. For four years I suffered untold agonies, such itching and pains until I was going to give up hope of getting rid of my pimples. The pimples festered and came to a head and would itch and smart as I had to scratch them and of course this made my face disfigured for some time.

"I tried about everything going for pimples and they did me no good till I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I was cured by three weeks' time." (Signed) E. N. Norris, May 10, 1913.

der at the police station, who returned it to the woman who paid it.

Superintendent Loughlin and Aldermen Hughes had something to say about how cab drivers work at the boats and depot. It was finally decided that Foster should secure information from the superintendent of hacks about the rates of fare and should follow the law and the board would give him another chance, but that there was to be no more of this whole carriage scheme. If a passenger enters his carriage and he drives him, he can charge only the legal rate.

This meeting was so long drawn out that an hour had passed when the matter was disposed of. Then Superintendent Loughlin had a problem about a boy who was undersized and for whom a license was asked. The board thought the superintendent should exercise some discretion.

Mr. Kelly reported on the Wellington Avenue billboard, that with the building inspector and the city solicitor he had inspected the board. It had been erected without a permit and it shut off a good deal of view. It was a question if the owners could not build, even if the inspector should refuse to grant a permit. The city solicitor had something to say about the law, and finally it was voted to refer this and all other billboards erected without permits to the city solicitor, to take action.

It was 8:24 and the ice matter was brought up. The mayor asked if any representative of the Newport Ice Company was present and Mr. Thomas Hayes responded. Mayor MacLeod said the board had been informed that the prices charged by the Newport Ice Company are unreasonably high, and that it had taken steps to prevent others from securing ice to bring into the city, and thus had tried to prevent competition. Mr. Hayes asked to have this repeated and the mayor repeated. Mr. Hayes asked if the mayor had any proof of such charges and the mayor said he had, but the question whether it was conclusive proof was a matter for the attorney general to pass upon.

Mr. Hayes said there are four ice concerns doing business in Newport—besides his own, Ernst Voigt, John Moore and another, whose name he did not know exactly. The Newport company has made no effort to keep out competition or to prevent any one from obtaining ice. As to prices, he called attention to the fact, which he stated, that the company had been able to cut only about 300 tons of ice last winter and this was only about 6 inches thick; all the other ice used here must be bought away Other cities are not so badly off. Fall River cut considerable ice, several thousand tons, but has advanced the wholesale price to $8 a ton in July, the same as here. When ice was cheaper the Newport Company sold for $6 a ton, but the prices have gone up and so the company advanced. Ice is scarce and high, and if people desire it they must pay high prices for it. The company has been offered contracts for its ice, but has declined to sell.

The mayor asked if fishing vessels had not gone to other places where ice is cheaper, and Mr. Hayes said not on account of the high price of ice, for ice is as high in New Bedford. When the fish were off Point Judith the fishermen came in here and shipped, but now with the fish off the Cape they go in at Boston, which is nearer. At Block Island there is some ice which can be had for $4.50, but the fishermen must haul it to the docks. He thought the information the mayor had came from fish agents and not from real fishermen. The ice situation is bad. It is not a question of what the price is but of having any ice.

The mayor said he was told that in March it was possible to buy ice for $2 a ton, to which was added freight and cartage. Mr. Hayes said ice could be had at that price in March. Newport is one of the worst places he knows for ice, as the fog cuts it so fast that a ton will not sell more than half a ton after it has been here a while. It is much different in this respect from Fall River, Providence and other nearby places. The shrinkage on cars runs from 33 to 40 per cent and on wagons from 10 to 12 per cent, and in this weather he did not know how much greater it is.

He told about what he had to do last winter to procure ice. Money had to be advanced for the cutting; a great deal was advanced for this purpose, and his company put it out. For some of the ice there is a sliding scale, the price for June being higher than for May, and for July higher than for June.

He had found that the cost of New Hampshire ice would be such that the company could not do business if there was any competition, the freight being $1.80 a ton and the shipping accommodations largely confined to one car a day. So they went to Maine and bought up or took option on enough to last the season. He did some figuring to show that the cost, shrinkage, freight and handling brought the price to $8.30 a ton when delivered to customers, and even then some overhead charges were not taken into account.

The mayor suggested that ice could be bought in Maine or New Hampshire for a certain price per ton, and Mr. Hayes said that ordinarily this is so, but this is a peculiar year. There was very little ice-cutting weather even down in Maine, and that came late. Agents were there from all along the coast, bidding, and any one who bought ice had to pay a big advance on the price of former years, and advance the money also. Agents from Baltimore had offered as high as $2.50 a ton for ice which in other years could be had for 50 cents a ton.

The mayor brought up the question of selling to other dealers. Mr. Hayes said Mr. Moore obtains his ice from Plymouth; his company would supply him if he would pay something on what he owed, but saw no reason for continuing to supply him if he is not going to pay. His company has not bought out the People's Ice Company. The men asked them to take their customers, because they could not pay the freight on ice and did not wish to see their customers left without any. The Newport Company offered to supply them temporarily until they could procure ice, but they said it was all up and they were going to quit. So the Newport took over the wagons, but did not pay anything for the customers. The People's Ice Company had advanced the price to retail trade before the Newport Company did, and for the same reason—the increased cost. He quoted prices which had been charged.

In regard to the fishermen he said the biggest buyer was the Newport Fisheries Company, which had never kicked at the price. Mr. Albro suggested that the Newport Ice Company and the Fisheries Company is the same thing. Mr. Hayes said no; the Fisheries is a big concern with $400,000 capital, incorporated in Maine, and the Ice company is a close corporation, incorporated in Delaware. Some men are in both; he and R. J. Anderton are the principal owners of the Fisheries Company, but there are many small owners.

Mr. Hughes spoke of the large trade which Newport business men had with the fishing vessels which once made this a harbor and landed their fish, and said that trade should be encouraged. Mr. Hayes told what the big scheme did. He said no boat came to Newport and went away with its fish because it would not pay the price asked for ice. Some had gone elsewhere, but it was because the price paid elsewhere was larger, if the captain did not intend to ship from here. He knew, because they have an agent on the dock all the time, and know just what is going on. Mr. Anderton had bought a car of ice to sell at $7 a ton, but he would find he could not afford to sell at that price. He would like to sell cheaper than he is selling, but it is impossible.

Alderman Albro said that, taking Mr. Hayes's own figures, still it struck him that ice at retail at $15 a ton is excessively high. Mr. Hayes said there is no profit in wholesaling ice at $8 a ton. The mayor thought he could bring contract ice here for $3.10 a ton, and Mr. Hayes said he had just sold 5,000 tons of ice for much more than $3.10.

He told again of the situation where there is ice and said no one is to blame for the present high prices but the Almighty; if He had given ice weather the present condition would not prevail and ice would be cheaper. In 1870 ice cost $20 a ton wholesale and $30 retail in Newport; in 1890 the prices were $12 and $20; in 1906, when conditions were not near so bad as today, the prices were $12 and $16 a ton. He paid $14 a ton for ice wholesale in 1906 and at times had to hire an expressman to cart it. He offered some clippings which he had made from Boston and Fall River papers, showing the ice conditions in those cities. He could sell the ice he has to the Arctic Ice Company of Fall River and make more on it than he will by retailing it in Newport.

Alderman Albro suggested that the board needed to know a great deal more about ice conditions and that the appointment of a committee to secure information seemed the best thing to do. The city solicitor asked some questions about the time when the Newport company contracted for ice.

Mr. Ernst Voigt said he was one of the committee of the Board of Trade to look into the ice situation, not to antagonize any one. All that Mr. Hayes had said was not so. He had bought ice in New Hampshire and did not put down any money or even give a guaranty bond, and he bought all he thought he needed. He said $8 a ton is not too high for ice at wholesale to dealers, but if the company can sell at that price it can afford to sell to fishermen at the dock at $7 and should do so for the best interests of Newport. One man and one horse carts to the fishermen and the ice is dumped on the dock. Two men and two horses and a great deal of work is necessary to deliver to wholesalers. At retail the company is delivering only four days a week instead of five, the pieces are smaller, and some people are unable to secure ice. If the company has the ice and proposes to do what Mr. Hayes says, supply the city, it should have more teams and supply the trade properly. He knew of at least one fishing boat which went elsewhere on account of the high price of ice.

Mr. Hayes said the price for fishermen is $8, and it is not and will not be $7. He told of big steamers coming in with so much mackerel that no one else could handle them, and they bought them and the steamers paid $8 for ice. He said he had not refused Mr. Voigt ice. Mr. Voigt said Mr. Hayes was not seen, but Mr. Greene, his agent, was seen and refused to sell him any ice.

Mr. William E. Brightman said he was glad he had come in this inquiry, for it is a move in the right direction. He considered that the board had done much good work for the city and is now engaged in the right line, but he thought there are other concerns which need investigation, and suggested that it continue the good work. The Newport Ice Company is not a monopoly, as there are others in the business here, but the Newport Water Works is and everyone is growling about the prices. The street railway company is a monopoly which is supplying very poor service. The city solicitor said there would be other investigations.

Mr. Brightman suggested that one of the biggest handicaps to progress in Newport is the action of the banks and he cited instances where the local banks would not do business. One was a refusal to discount a note which the Newport Ice Company had. He thought the older trusts should be investigated before the ice company is attacked. The company is made up of live men, who are doing business. They have been going only a short time, while other concerns have been going on for years and should have the first investigation.

Mr. Hayes said the note which the ice company had was for a small amount and it was put in the safe. If the company desired it discounted it would have no trouble elsewhere. All its banking is done elsewhere and it is amply supplied with money.

This finished the ice business and a committee consisting of the mayor, Aldermen Albro and Hughes and the city solicitor was appointed to look into the matter of ice prices and business.

The mayor had a telegram from the Robinson Fire Apparatus Company, asking for an extension of time on the chemical, which is now in the paint shop. Alderman Hughes thought it was about time the apparatus was here and suggested that the mayor find out just when to expect it and call the attention of the company to the fact that it has a contract to finish it this year. This the mayor will do.

The board was indisposed to take any action on the matter of a second chemical.

The board voted to authorize the city treasurer to turn over the Fourth of July appropriation to the committee on the Fourth, and adjourned.

ROOSEVELT THE CENTRAL FIGURE.

content and leads directly to industrial strife.

In conclusion Mr. Walker made a strong plea against militarism and in favor of arbitration for the settlement of all disputes among nations.

Colonel Roosevelt.

Colonel Roosevelt was next introduced and was loudly applauded as he rose from his seat. After the cheering had ceased he spoke at length, his address being in part as follows:

The demand made in the first national platform of the Progressive party for regulation of corporations and combinations, to "insure their doing justice to their rivals, to their customers and to their employes," has been emphasized, Colonel Roosevelt declared, by what has occurred since election in the West Virginia bituminous coal fields. In opening his speech he pointed to the Progressive platform upon which he ran for the Presidency last fall, as a document which upholders of social and industrial justice in the future will recognize as one of the great documents of American political history. From it he cited two demands, the first that the national government undertake on a gigantic scale the work of harnessing the flood waters of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, using for that purpose the outfit that has been used in the construction of the Panama canal. The second demand Colonel Roosevelt dwelt upon at considerable length. He quoted from court decisions and declared that he wished he could make the men of property understand that, in fighting such decisions and such conditions as in West Virginia, he was fighting against anarchy in favor of law and order and for property.

"The utter futility of the plan of action, or rather non-action, advocated in both the Republican and Democratic platforms last year, and christened by President Wilson with magniloquent vagueness 'The New Freedom' has been strikingly shown by what has occurred in West Virginia," Colonel Roosevelt declared. "'The New Freedom' is nothing what ever but the right of the strong to prey on the weak, of the big men to crush the little men, and to shield their iniquity beneath the cry that they are exercising freedom."

Colonel Roosevelt's speech sounded the key-note of the Progressive policies and opened the discussion of party ideals and ideas that will continue two days. Referring again to President Wilson's article on "The New Freedom," Colonel Roosevelt said:

"A careful study of the articles that have appeared by President Wilson, dealing with this subject since he was President, has left me somewhat puzzled as to what he really does mean, but of course I assume that there must be meaning, and if this assumption is warranted, then 'The New Freedom' means nothing whatever but the old license translated into terms of pleasant rhetoric.

"There is but one way to interfere with freedom to inflict slavery on others, and that is by invoking the supervisory, the regulatory, the controlling and directing power of the government precisely as the Progressives last year demanded in their platform and as I and others like me demanded in our speeches."

Dealing with the regulation of corporations and combinations and using the West Virginia strike as the basis for his arguments for the adoption of Progressive principles, Colonel Roosevelt said in part:

"What is needed is the thorough rooting out of the conditions which brought about the dreadful state of affairs in the West Virginia bituminous fields. In that region we see in actual operation the over-competitive conditions, to which the advocates of the 'new freedom' would have us return under the impression that they offer a panacea for all our ills.

"Under the pressure of an unenlightened capitalistic opinion, the West Virginian courts have rendered decisions, in strict accordance with the principles of the 'new freedom', which themselves serve as the most striking object lessons of the need of the widespread application of Progressive principles. In the district where the rioting has occurred, the employing operators have endeavored to keep the miners in a state of practical serfage by the use of the company stores. This fact has been recognized and the practice forbidden in most civilized countries; in England, for instance, legislation was passed forbidding this practice more than 170 years ago. The West Virginia legislature did its duty by passing laws requiring the cash payment of wages, and prohibiting persons and corporations engaged in mining and manufacture from selling any merchandise or supplies from stores to their employes at a greater percentage of profit than to outsiders. These laws were contested in the courts as unconstitutional.

"As a whole the West Virginia court has declared that they were ineffective, as in contravention of the constitution. The court explicitly states that a contract for labor is property, thereby putting the life blood of men, women and children on a level with the commodities they produce.

"In 33 West Virginia, 179 and 183, the court explicitly repudiated the notion that the miners are entitled to be paid in cash or can by law be secured such a right, or that the mine owners can be prohibited by law from selling to the laborers at a higher price than to outsiders. The court stated that these laws represented 'unjust interference with private contracts and business,' and that they were an 'insulting attempt to put the laborer under legislative tutelage,' which was 'degrading to his manhood' and 'suppressive of his rights as a citizen of the United States.'

"These opinions quit the case of the 'new freedom' concisely. They say that the laborer has the freedom, or as they phrase it the 'right' to sell his labor as he thinks best, and that any law contrailing this right is unconstitutional. Literally and exactly this decision stands on a par with one, which in the name of freedom should guarantee the laborer the right to sell himself into slavery. Finally when the result was an outburst of wild violence, so that there practically remained no law, no constitution, no court, the authorities were forced to grapple with the actual need of things by instituting martial law.

"Judging from the letters published by Father Collins, a priest whose knowledge of the situation and devotion to the cause of labor seem to be unquestioned, it was necessary to declare martial law. But, once order has been restored, it is even more essential that the governmental authorities shall resolutely devote themselves to the destruction of the bitterly unjust conditions which were responsible for causing the anarchy.

"I wish I could make the men of property in this country, the big business men in New York, in Boston, in Providence, throughout our country, understand that in fighting such conditions as these in the bituminous coal fields, and in fighting such court decisions as those which I have quoted, I am fighting against anarchy, against the socialism of the Industrial Workers of the World, and in favor of law and order and for property.

"In dealing with big corporations, as in dealing with all business, it is an absolute necessity for us to abandon the utter folly of discriminating against them on the ground of size, instead of on the ground of conduct. Combinations may exist for a good purpose just as they may exist for a bad purpose, whether among business men, among farmers, among laborers; and as regards all of them our aim should be effectively to suppress combinations that work evil, and also to favor those that do well, while nevertheless exercising over them such thoroughgoing control as to enable us to be sure that they in very fact do well, alike to competitors, to wage workers and to the general public.

"Our proposal is to put the government, acting for the general public, in such shape that it will not ask justice as a favor, but demand it as a right which it is ready and able to enforce. The constitution belongs to the people and not the people to the constitution, and the courts are the servants of the people precisely as is true of all other public servants, legislative and executive alike. It is for the people, and not the courts, to say whether we shall have such laws in the interest of social and industrial justice, acts providing for cash payment in wages and abolishing these company stores.

"In the words of Abraham Lincoln, we propose that the people shall control both the legislatures and the courts, not to pervert the constitution, but to overthrow those who themselves pervert the constitution into an instrument for perpetuating injustice, instead of making it what it must and shall be made, the most effective of all possible means for securing to the people of the whole

A PERFECT DENTIFRICE MUST INCLUDE HEALING AND GERMICIDAL QUALITIES.

A mere cleanser of teeth is not always a good dentifrice. Most everyone cleanses his or her teeth and mouth at least once a day, nevertheless most adults are afflicted with Riggs Disease—soft, spongy, sore or receding gums. Why? Because they do not follow hygienic laws.

Dr. Forhan's Dental Cream is an exception in the line of practical dentifrices. It contains a good percentage of "Forhan's Pyorrhea Astringent," used exclusively by Dentists as a powerful but harmless germicide.

Dr. Forhan's Dental Cream is put up in tubes equal in quantity, but superior in quality to most 50 cent products. To introduce, price is now 25 cents per tube.

THE STARRY HEAVENS IN JULY.

Jupiter and Beautiful Constellation of the Scorpion Enter Evening Sky.

Mercury, Venus, Mars and Saturn to be Conspicuous Objects to the Observer.

[Professor Doolittle of the University of Pennsylvania.]

The most interesting event of the present month is the entrance of the magnificent planet Jupiter into the evening sky. We see this brilliant object shining out in the southeast immediately after sunset, but unfortunately it remains low in the heavens throughout the entire night, never mounting so high as one third of the way to the zenith. This is because this world is now at a point in the heavens almost exactly opposite the sun; as the latter body is now at almost its greatest distance above the celestial equator, the great planet is at nearly its lowest position among the stars. Like the sun, Jupiter is ever moving slowly eastward around the celestial sphere, following very nearly the sun's path, AEB, Figure 1, among the stars, but 12 years are occupied by the planet in making the journey. Jupiter is now in Sagittarius, but when we see it six years from now it will have mounted high above the celestial equator to nearly the position in the heavens occupied by the sun at the time of the longest day. It will then be in the most favorable possible position for observation.

Next in interest to the return of Jupiter is undoubtedly the appearance of the beautiful constellation of the Scorpion, which, with its beautiful group of stars extending from C to D, Figure 1, and its bright, red Antares, at F, now forms a most striking object in the southern heavens. Still nearer the zenith, the Serpent may now be well traced out, a long and winding constellation whose head is just below the Northern Crown and whose tail is found, far in the east, among the stars which form the beautiful group known as the Eagle. North of the latter group we see the strange little figure known as the Dolphin or Job's Coffin, while arching directly through the zenith there is a beautiful train composed of the Northern Cross, the Lyre, Hercules, Bootes and the Great Bear, all of which are now in most excellent position for study.

The many faint stars between the Serpent and Hercules form the large Serpent Holder—an elderly man holding the Serpent in his hands, and a most ill-omened constellation in astrology whose stars occasioned death by poisoning, while to the Moors and Turks the group was known as a Stork.

Throughout this whole region of the heavens, which is largely occupied by the wonderful summer branch of the Milky Way, there are innumerable objects of interest for one who possesses a small telescope. For example, in Sagittarius alone he might well, after examining Jupiter, turn to the wonderful star-clusters at H, K and L, each of which is so marvelous a cloud of stars heaped together that it is even visible to the naked eye. And in examining these objects it should not be forgotten that each of the seemingly innumerable stars is a great sun, probably many times as large as our own. At the point M, a little way above the cluster L, there is one of the finest fields of the entire sky for a small telescope. Just above this, at N, there is the faint Horse-shoe nebula, and at P there is the wonderful Trifid nebula, a remarkable nebulous cloud which is separated into three distinct parts by black lines which run through it. Lastly, each of the stars marked S in this constellation will be found to be a double star.

The comet whose discovery was recently announced proved rather a disappointing object, both on account of its small size and on account of its faintness. At no time was it nearly bright enough to be seen without a moderately large telescope, and had its path not happened to pass within 66 millions of miles of the earth, which is unusually near, it would probably not have been discovered.

The comets are great nebulous clouds, composed of meteoric matter, gasses, meteoric dust and matter in a radiant condition which, as they drift through the depths of space, begin to feel the pull of our sun and to fall toward that body. But the chance that one of them will begin its motion in such a way as to hit the moving sun, or to even pass very near it, is exceedingly small. Each comet as it draws nearer to the sun will move ever more and more swiftly, and will finally swing around that body and draw away from us through a very different region of space from that through which it formerly moved. There must be immense numbers of these bodies whose paths are thus completely changed by their passage around the sun, but which, even when nearest the sun, are so far away from the earth that we do not detect them. It is only when a comet has drawn comparatively near the sun that forces of a gravitational and electrical nature so agitate its great mass that it becomes very bright. It is at this time that the sun drives a part of its material away and thus forms the tail. As the comet recedes from the sun, its tail disappears and the whole mass grows fainter and fainter until it finally becomes lost to us.

The present comet was discovered at the point T, Figure 1, just below the constellation of the Dolphin. It was then approaching the earth, its least distance from us being reached about June 1, when it was 66 millions of miles away. Its path lay outside of that of the earth, and the comet moved around the sun in an opposite direction from that in which the earth is moving; consequently the two bodies rapidly separated. Their distance apart will increase from 117 millions to 216 millions of miles during the present month, and throughout this time the comet will be so faint that it can only be seen in the largest telescopes. The portion of the apparent path pursued throughout July lies in the beautiful little group of stars known as the Maiden's Hair, in the position shown in Figure 1.

Mercury will be seen at its greatest distance east of the sun on the evening of July 7, and for a few evenings before and after this date will shine out almost due west, low down in the sunset glow.

Venus, Mars and Saturn are all near together and conspicuous in the east in the early morning sky, just before sunrise. The first planet will be seen at its greatest distance west of the sun on the morning of July 4, at which time it will rise nearly three hours before sunrise. It will pass below the planet Saturn on the evening of July 21, so that the next morning these two worlds will be seen close together in the sky.

But the most favorably situated of all the planets is the great Jupiter, the world which is much larger than all the other worlds of our solar system taken together. The study of the ever-changing bands and other markings of this beautiful planet is a work of never failing interest. The observer will find that many of the smaller areas are pushing ahead through the great cloud of surface vapors which surrounds them with a speed of many thousands of miles an hour, and that the whole equatorial region of the planet completes its revolution and ends its day in a somewhat shorter time than the regions in higher latitudes.

Evidently this world is in a very different condition from our own. It is, in fact, believed that it is at so high a temperature that it is nothing but a ball of vapor; that there may be an inner core which under the immense pressure of the overlying material may be so dense as pitch, or even that there may be a quite small core which is solid. And it is probable that the parts of the planet near the centre turn about the axis more rapidly than those parts which lie nearer the surface. In the year 1878, a great, oval, reddish area appeared on the planet, 30,000 miles long and 7,000 miles wide, which persisted for many years and may even yet be seen. It is thought that the disturbance which produced this strange marking lay very deep within the body of the planet.

By consulting the American Nautical Almanac, or one of the several smaller almanacs copied from this, it will be seen that many interesting phenomena of the four bright satellites will occur during this month. For example, July 29 the inner moon will move onto the edge of the planet at 10 hours 47 minutes p. m. and the fourth moon will pass behind the planet at 16 minutes past midnight. At this time but two bright moons will be visible, both to the left of the disc. The first moon will move off the edge at five minutes past 1 o'clock, its intensely black shadow both entering and leaving the disc 35 minutes later than the moon itself.

From the twenty eighth to the thirtieth of the month bright, slow-moving shooting stars may be seen to dart outward in all directions from a certain point in the constellation Aquarius, 15 degrees to the left of the star U, Figure 1. Although at 9 o'clock on this date this region has risen, it is still low in the heavens and the shower is best observed at a later hour. It will doubtless be most noticeable from about 11 o'clock in the evening until 3 o'clock of the following morning.

July 3 our earth will have reached its greatest distance from the sun. It will then be 3,200,000 miles farther away than at the time of its nearest approach, six months ago.

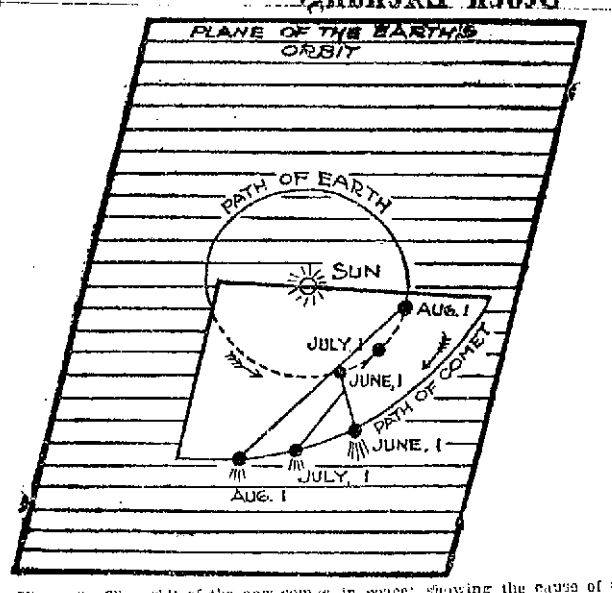

Figure 2. The orbit of the new comet in space; showing the cause of its very rapid increase in distance from the earth.

THE PUBLIC REGARDED.

Stockholders of the New Haven Road Addressed by Protective Committee.

In a letter addressed to stockholders of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad the stockholders' protective committee says the committee was formed because criticism of the company had become so general and so acute as to seriously injure the stockholders' interests. After stating that proxies from 2,691 shareholders owning 262,577 shares have been received, and that the directorate of the New Haven is co-operating with the committee in its investigation, the letter adds:

"The committee, while not intending to investigate all the charges that have been preferred, desires to inform itself fully as to such transactions of the past as will enable it to discuss and suggest, in the interest of the shareholders, the best course in future, having especial regard to questions of operation, organization and finance, and to those matters affecting the public which have been so largely discussed in public".

BRILLIANT VICTORIES.

American Exhibitors Win Cups at the International Horse Show.

The International Horse Show at Olympia, London, ended this week with a brilliant series of victories for the American exhibitors. Mr. W. H. Moore took the Hague Challenge cup for the best pony or horse in single harness with Lord Seaton. The cup now becomes his property, as he had a previous win to his credit. Mr. Moore also won the French cup for pairs with Lord and Lady Seaton in class 55. The latter also won the Lowther Trophy for her owner.

Mr. Walter Winans carried off the Oakland cup for riding horses with Fairy Hill, and the Newport cup for light harness horses with Bonnie View.

Showing 30 horses, Mr. Moore won 17 firsts, four seconds and four thirds. His awards included the Field cup in the coaching Corinthian and the International Gold Challenge cup for park teams.

Mr. Alfred G. Vanderbilt exhibited nine horses, practically confining himself to the coaching events. He won the coaching marathon and two seconds for four-in-hand teams.

Mr. J. Sumner Draper of Boston showed five horses, winning three seconds and three thirds.

Mr. E. B. McLean of Washington exhibited or the first time. His seven horses won three seconds and three thirds.

NEGRO ELKS RESTRAINED.

Injunction Against Lodgemen From Usurping Name Granted in Ohio.

In a common pleas court decision Judge A. C. Reisinger of Eaton, Ohio, allowed a perpetual injunction order, restraining the negro organization known as the Improved Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the World from making further use of the name of "Elks" or any of the designated or emblematic possessions of the white Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks in the state of Ohio.

Application for an injunction to restrain the negro lodgemen from usurping the name, insignia, badges, etc., of the white organization was made last August to the court at Dayton, through the Grand Lodge, and the decision has been pending since the hearing of the case in Dayton this year.

The Elks have a membership of 400,000 in the United States and 22,500 in the state of Ohio.

FRANKLIN'S WILL RESTORED.

All controversies as to the disposition of the estate of Benjamin Franklin have been settled by the restoration of the manuscript of his will by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. The document, which was recently resurrected from a vault under the city hall in Philadelphia to verify an office copy, was found to have deteriorated so much that restoration was necessary.

The testament exudes the personality of the great man, from his own description of himself in the last quaint bequest, His son William, once governor of New Jersey, was cut off with a tract of land in Nova Scotia with the following explanation:

"The part he played against me in the late war, which is of public notoriety, will account for my leaving him no more of an estate he endeavored to deprive me of."

DISTRICT OF CENTRAL FRANCE.

country the right everywhere to create conditions which will tend for the uplift of the ordinary, the average men, women and children of the United States."

Colonel Fridge.

Colonel B. F. Fridge of Mississippi was introduced as a representative of the South, a life-long Democrat, who owing to conditions in his part of the country had given his support to the Progressive party. Colonel Fridge said:

"Up to last August I was a died-in-the-wool, rock-ribbed Democrat. For years I looked for some way to leave the Democratic party, but in my Southern state I saw no way honorably. My grandfather and my father, and all my people, have been Democratic all their lives, and when I left the Democratic party, unsolicited, I burned the bridges behind me.

"When I made up my mind to attend this meeting I began to ask my Democratic friends around in the different parts of the state, especially in my village, what they thought of the future of the Democratic party. Most of them told me they did not know what to think, but we must do something. When a Democrat says he has to do something, he means he is dissatisfied with his party. All he needs is encouragement and to see enough of the flock start in the other direction and he will fall in line.

After speaking of the conditions in the South, Colonel Fridge said: We of the South have virtually pensioned the young negro. We pay our taxes, and a certain amount is appropriated for their education. Thousands of them are going to school and learning to read and write, but what are we as a nation doing for them?

What are we going to do with these poor old creatures 70, 80 and some 85 years old, sitting around in their little old hovels, who can neither read nor write, saying their prayers and waiting for the time to come to cross the river. A great many of them are just merely existing. The younger negro does not care for them. Even in their ignorance they are a proud old people. They have an abhorrence of going to the poorhouse.

I take it up with you today to help do something for them. Let it be a national affair. See that Congress passes a law giving these poor old negroes a little pension. Three dollars a month, nine dollars a quarter, would make them happy. If you will do this I will feel that I have accomplished something.

Several others were on the program to speak, but owing to the lateness of the hour, and the necessity for Colonel Roosevelt to leave to go to the Training Station, the meeting was broken up without formality. There was an attempt by many personally to meet the ex-President and shake his hand. He remained on to say a word to the Boy Scouts and then was hurried through the convention hall as the band played a national air, and entering an automobile on the road at the back of the beach hurried to the Training Station. The crowd in the dining hall rapidly separated and the day's observance was over. There was, however, a display of fireworks at the beach in the evening.

FRECKLES.

Don't Hide Them With a Veil, but Remove Them With the Othine Prescription.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by any of the Liggett's stores under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even two or three applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

ADD TO YOUR PERSONAL ADORNMENTS

By the Use of Newbro's Herpicide

A pretty woman may enhance her beauty and a plain woman become good looking by the proper care of her hair.

Nice hair, pretty hair, growing on the head it adorns, is one of nature's greatest beautifiers.

The kind of hair which always makes us look the second time, follows the use of Newbro's Herpicide, and is possible for every woman.

Regular applications of Herpicide kill the hair-destroying dandruff germ, keep the hair from coming out and add to it that luxuriance, snap and luster which are essential to hair beauty.

Newbro's Herpicide is the Original scalp prophylactic. All other hair remedies claiming to kill the dandruff germ are simply trying to trade upon the reputation of genuine Herpicide.

Applications may be obtained at good barber shops and hair dressers.

Send 10c in postage to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich., for sample and booklet.

Don't Kick Against a Stone Wall

KICKING a stone wall does no good and only prevents further progress. As a pastime it may furnish some exercise, but it is extremely wearing on the nerves, shoe leather and temper. The parcel post is a stone wall that the small merchant thinks falsely he has reason to kick. It has brought him increased competition with the mail order houses, according to his view.

But the parcel post stone wall has a hole in it that leads the small merchant into a fertile country where his erstwhile competitors can only follow after considerable delay and at greater expense. The "hole" is the zone system, which makes every merchant the center of a circle whose diameter is 100 miles, within which he can deliver goods much more quickly and at a lower postal rate than any mail order house.

The parcel post is no longer a theory, but a fact; and facts, like stone walls, are futile things to kick. Take advantage of what it offers instead.

CITY OF BOSTON
WILL SELL AT AUCTION
TUG "CORMORANT"
Wednesday, July 16, at Noon
At Congress Street Bridge
The "Cormorant" was built for the City of Boston in 1893, at a cost of $26,000. The boat was very solidly constructed for towing purposes. Its dimensions are: Length, 98 feet; width, 20 feet; draft, 10 feet; tonnage, 99; engine, compound condensing cylinders, 16 and 28 inches diameter; stroke, 20 inches; head room under decks, over 6 feet. The "Cormorant" has been employed for the purpose of towing the scows used in connection with the disposal of refuse, but the operation of the new refuse disposal contract made its use unnecessary. Its sale is considered advisable, since it is not needed by any other department at the present time. The constant service of the boat has required it to be kept in a high state of efficiency, and the expenditure of a small amount should make it excellently qualified for commercial uses. The boat may be seen at Congress St. bridge.

purchasing of votes it will take a long time for the country districts.

She said business conditions, church conditions, market conditions and roads are bad in the rural districts. She paid tribute to the farms about Newport, saying that they do not represent the true farms of the country, but they have a bad influence on the public, because the prices and products are boosted here beyond what is reasonable elsewhere.

She believed that as things are running in the rural districts there is a reduction of the material which in the past has become the able men of the cities and the nation. There must be a change to make the rural dwellers more contented and relieve them from the terrible monotony, and also raise from them the burden of long hours, which they are learning to know do not exist elsewhere. The cities depend upon the country for their real life, and to maintain the life of the country something must be done! It must be conserved. The Progressives were the first, she said, to see this situation and study it.

Dr. Lewis Frissell, with the subject "National Efficiency and Public Health" went back to the times when diseases sapped the life of nations. Malaria, the black plague, the sleeping disease, hookworm and others were spoken of. Typhoid is our great disease, and largely because we are a self-reliant people but ill-informed, and a comparison with other countries is not to our credit. We are well protected against epidemics and have shown great ability in sanitary protection in the Canal Zone. He showed the necessity of the conservation of the productive power of the people, rather than the loss of so much by illness.

Philip P. Wells spoke on "The Next Step in Water Power Legislation." He reviewed the attempts at legislation and the short-comings of the laws and their effect. There is need, according to the speaker, of two kinds of control, federal and state, and control that shall control. Much land has been sold without safeguards and many water supplies have likewise been taken up, which means unjust tax upon the people for power, light and travel. He said the government should put itself in position to prevent monopolization of this natural power.

Herbert Knox Smith spoke briefly on "The Progressives and Natural Resources." He said by the way we have been letting go of our natural resources we have been surrendering our interests so that we are ceasing longer to be a free people. He believed in the government reclaiming the timber, water and mineral resources which have been injustly gathered in centralized control, and then providing some way in which they should be let out, to give a fair profit at a reasonable cost, with an income to the public. He said the Democrats are being buncoed in their state rights plan, for the interests will secure all worth having, while the Republican plan is so negative that it is not worth considering.

Mrs. Maud Howe Elliot, who said she was crowded out of the first day's program, pleaded for the support of the party organ of this district.

This afternoon the Social and Industrial justice theme was taken up and a number of speakers were heard along this line. Miss Jane Addams was to make the address of the afternoon, but it has been impossible for her to reach here in time.

This evening the conference will close with a reception in the convention hall and more fireworks on the beach. The seats are being taken from the big tent and in time it will cease to be the biggest thing on the beach.

FINANCIAL.

NEW YORK, July 3, Wall Street—The market opened with Amalgamated Copper 64¾, American Smelting and Refining 62, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe 96⅜, Canadian Pacific 215⅝, Chesapeake & Ohio 53⅝, Erie 21⅞, New York Central 97½, Northern Pacific 107½, Pennsylvania 111⅜, Reading 157¾, Union Pacific 146⅝, United States Steel 52⅝.

10:30—Initial prices of stocks were slightly lower today. Apprehensions aroused abroad by the outbreak of serious hostilities among the Balkan nations were reflected in the depression of American stocks in London, which influenced the opening here. The Copper stocks, as a group, were the heaviest, but their losses were less than a point, and movements in most cases were limited to small fractions. The list stiffened after the opening, recovering the losses, but later sold off again. There were no signs of heavy pressure at any point, however. Speculative interest apparently was dead, and after the first few minutes of trading the market came almost to a standstill.

Noon—Operations during the morning were governed largely by the course of affairs abroad. The effect of the Balkan difficulties, as reflected in depression of the European markets, was heightened by the Bank of England's weekly statement, showing a sharp falling off of the proportion of reserve. London sold some Union Pacific and Canadian Pacific here and would have offered more, said arbitrage brokers, but for the thinness of this market. Taking their cue from conditions abroad traders put out small lines of stocks. Approach of the triple holiday restricted trading to nominal proportions, however, and while the drift was downward selling was not large enough to affect values materially. After the irregular movement of the early trading the market remained on a dead level near yesterday's close. Bonds were steady. Money on call: steady, at 2 per cent. prime mercantile paper, 6 per cent. Exchanges $344,616,986; balances, $17,435,641.

A VALUABLE PAMPHLET.

The Historical Society's Book on Oliver Hazard Perry in Newport.

The Newport Historical Society has published a very interesting pamphlet on Oliver Hazard Perry in Newport and Newport in the War of 1812. The pamphlet includes a sketch of the life of Perry, an account of the battle of Lake Erie, from the Newport Mercury of October 2, 1813; the story of his return journey, his arrival in Newport and the reception and testimonial given by the citizens of Newport; of his death at Trinidad and the funeral solemnities at Newport, and the dedication of William G. Turner's statue of Perry on Washington square, September 10, 1885. There is also a list of the men serving with Perry in the battle of Lake Erie and a list of his living descendants. There are numerous illustrations, the frontispiece being a picture of Perry from the portrait in the possession of the Historical Society, a picture of Perry as a midshipman painted on a board from the floor of his house on the Point, the original of which is in the society's possession; a copy of John P. Newell's painting of the Battle of Lake Erie, the model of the Perry statue, relics of 1812, the Perry mansion on Touro Street, reproductions of the funeral car of Commodore Perry and the list of subscribers to the silver vase presented to him by the citizens of Newport, the burial place of Perry in the Island cemetery, the Perry monument on Washington square, and a memorial to Commodore Perry, drawn by Miss Elizabeth C. Brenton.

The pamphlet was prepared by Hon. Robert S. Franklin and Miss Edith M. Tilley, secretary and librarian of the society, as a committee of the Newport Historical Society, and is of great value to historians.

NO VACANCY EXISTS.

John F. Titus Appointed Special Policeman, Resignation Not Accepted.

At the meeting of the Board of Aldermen Tuesday evening John F. Titus was appointed a special policeman. He is officially the driver of Hose 1. There has been some talk about his resigning, but it is held that the Board of Firewards cannot accept his resignation, as it cannot fill the vacancy caused thereby. If this contention is correct, and it is on that idea that the Council has always acted in giving the Board of Aldermen power to fill vacancies, there can be no vacancy until the matter has been referred to the Board of Aldermen, acting as representatives of the Council by special vote of the Council. The Board of Firewards can nominate, but their nominations are simply on paper until the Council, or its representatives, the Aldermen, confirm them.

FOR NAVAL INSTRUCTORS.

Ensigns Assigned to Duty at the Training Station.

Ensigns A. E. Montgomery and W. H. Osgood of the Virginia, A. E. Bennett and H. A. Ward of the Florida and A. B. Sanborn of the Vermont, with a sixth officer to be taken from the Connecticut, have been assigned to duty as instructors at the Naval Training Station and will begin next Monday the courses in English studies, including reading, writing, arithmetic, geography and history, for the apprentice seamen. These courses have been arranged in conformity with recent orders of the Secretary of the Navy and arrangements have been made in barracks 8 for seating 150 apprentices, who will be given an hour's schooling every day, in addition to their instructions in seamanship, gunnery and other departments, in which they are now being trained. The officers detailed for the additional courses are quartered on the Constellation.

A GLUT OF PERSONAL BAGGAGE.

The mix-up of personal baggage on the railroad is such that some travelers coming to Newport may wait for days before they receive all their trunks. The baggage room at the New York dock is filled with trunks, despite the work of the expressmen to take them away, and the expressmen have checks which they have been holding for some time, waiting for trunks to show up. To help out, the recently graduated class from the Naval Academy is just reporting to join the ships which are not here, and their baggage is added to the flood of summer baggage usual at this time.

NAVY DAY AT THE BEACH.

Ex-President Plowing Though the Sand. In the Convention Hall When Colonel Roosevelt Arrived.

IN HONOR OF ROOSEVELT.

Battalion Drill by Apprentice Seamen at Naval Training Station.

Wednesday afternoon, at 5 o'clock, a battalion drill was given by the apprentice seamen at the Naval Training Station in honor of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, and the event proved a fitting close to the Navy Day program. A large crowd of Newporters and strangers had gathered long before the drill commenced. Benches were placed several rows deep on the terrace in front of the administration building, from which an excellent view of the field was obtained. The sun beat persistently upon the heads of the people, and, despite the white uniforms of the officers and the light dresses of the women, everybody looked and felt very warm. The tediousness of waiting for the beginning of the drill was greatly relieved by the practice manoeuvres of several companies which wished to put the finishing touches on their work before the ex-President should arrive.

Promptly, at five minutes before 5, Colonel Roosevelt, who came by automobile, was met by Admiral Caperton and Captain Welles, while the guards along the roadside stood at attention. The battalion meanwhile had formed in a long double line and stood with arms presented as Colonel Roosevelt and the two officers took their position at a point opposite the centre. The party also stood at attention while the band played a part of the "Star Spangled Banner" and during a part of the President's salute, fired in respect to the visitor of the day. Immediately after, the colonel was attacked by a battery of cameras and moving picture machines.

After the firing of the salute the battalion began its manoeuvres, which were complicated, but well executed. The men marched and drilled with precision and mistakes were not in evidence. The battalion presented a pretty picture as the men in their white suits with dark blue collars marched along in the sunlight, which late in the afternoon broke through a bank of clouds which had piled up suddenly.

The battalion first formed the company square and then executed the street riot formation. Following this the command, "Sections right and left, turn double time," was given and was well carried out. The battalion then marched the length of the drill ground and was joined by a company of recruits, and with these formed a long line and stacked arms. The semaphore code was then illustrated by the entire battalion.

Shortly after, the battalion, headed by the Station band, passed before the reviewing stand. Colonel Roosevelt then retired to the administration building, where he was received by a large group of friends and was entertained at a light luncheon. About 20 minutes before 6 he again watched the drill, which ended as it had begun, with the playing of "Star Spangled Banner," and the firing of a salute.

Throughout the whole drill Colonel Roosevelt appeared to be keenly interested in the work of the apprentices and seemed to enjoy the sight very much. He left at the close and as he passed down the hill to the bridge, waved his panama and nodded a cheery greeting to the spectators, who lined the road. Some of the visitors lingered until the battalion marched to its quarters, where the boys were to enjoy a substantial supper after their exhausting but excellent drill.

McMANUS—MORRIS.

Ceremony at St. Augustin's Followed by a Wedding Breakfast.

The marriage of Mr. John Justin McManus to Miss Mary Elizabeth Morris was celebrated at St. Augustin's Church this morning. The wedding was very quiet, but pretty. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Greta Morris, while Mr. Cornelius C. Moore acted as best man for the groom. The bride wore a traveling suit of white broadcloth and a large white hat with white plume. The bridesmaid's dress was of violet moire with a purple hat grimmed with pansies. The bride carried a beautiful bouquet of lilies of the valley and an ivory prayerbook; the bridesmaid carried sweet peas and an ivory prayerbook. Father Ready officiated at the ceremony. The altar was prettily decorated by Schultz with cut roses and palms.

Immediately following the service the newly-married couple left on the 8:10 train for Boston, where they will go to Portland for their honeymoon. A wedding breakfast was served at the house of the bride's father, at 41 Dixon street. Mr. and Mrs. McManus were the recipients of many handsome gifts. The groom presented Mr. Moore with a pair of gold cuff links while Miss Greta Morris received a beautiful sapphire and pearl pendant crescent from her sister. Mr. and Mrs. McManus expect to make Boston their home.

ROOSEVELT THE CENTRAL FIGURE.

Greeted With Enthusiasm by His Admirers at the Clambake.

His Address With Those of Others Given in the Beach Dining Hall.

The Progressive party's day in Newport, which had been styled Navy day because of Colonel Roosevelt's speech in favor of the navy, included as one of its main features the clambake at the beach. Although there was in attendance a very much smaller number than had been heralded as expected to come, and several changes in the minor details of the program were made necessary, there were present at the dinner an enthusiastic 800 or 1,000—not more—who were largely inclined towards the Progressive principles and cheered enthusiastically whenever Theodore Roosevelt's name was mentioned or when he made a telling point in his own speech. There were addresses by former United States Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, Joseph Walker of Massachusetts, Colonel D. F. Fridge of Mississippi and by Colonel Roosevelt himself.

Following the dinner the ex-President went to the Training Station, where he reviewed the brigade of apprentice seamen at their weekly dress parade, and in the evening dined informally with Mrs. John Nicholas Brown at "Harbour Court," leaving by the boat for New York. Colonel Roosevelt was the principal figure of the day and was everywhere the centre of attraction, greeting many personally and speaking in his characteristically forcible manner.

The Bake Delayed.

The dinner was late in starting, although the beach association had everything in readiness at the time finally named, two hours earlier than the original. There was considerable delay in admitting the diners, as only one half-door was used and the police and ticket-takers, sailors from the Naval Training Station, were able only with great difficulty to keep back the crowd so that each one could present his ticket. Only one table was reserved, that for the special guests, and the diners found seats where they could.

The beach association had arranged to care for a very much larger number. Long tables were arranged in the old dining room, in the new east section and in the convention hall, but there were not enough persons to fill all the seats in the dining room, and the tables in the convention hall were soon taken down and the hall set out with small tables for luncheon parties. There was practically no decoration in the dining room. The exception was the guest table in the southeast corner, where there were several vases of sweet peas and pink carnations. There were a few vases of roses on the other tables.

The Dinner Itself.

When everything was in readiness the dinner started. It was a regular Rhode Island clambake, the menu including clam chowder, baked clams, brown and white bread, baked fish, potatoes, sausage, corn, clam fritters and lobsters, and it was served in an excellent manner by the large corps of waiters. In fact, there were more waiters than were needed, and those who were to have been employed in the convention hall were dismissed.

Head Waiter James Cassim had personal charge of the guest table, at which were seated Mr. Dresser, who presided as toastmaster; Colonel Roosevelt, Senator Beveridge, Oscar S. Straus, Joseph Walker, Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Maud Howe Elliott, Dr Perin, Colonel S. F. Fridge and Mr. Holmes of Providence. This table was so placed that the crowd on the outside could look directly upon the diners and during the eating and the speaking which followed many crowded about to see and hear what they could.

Among the guests at the dinner were the Boy Scouts, who had done excellent patrol work during the day; the non-commissioned naval officers, who had acted as ushers and assisted materially in various ways, and the policemen, or as many as could be spared from their duties.

The dinner had progressed to the lobster course when Mr. Arthur H. Commerford with the megaphone announced that, owing to the great heat, it had been decided to have the speaking in the dining room instead of in the tent. Shortly afterwards the announcement was made that the dinner would be interrupted to enable Senator Beveridge to speak and catch the train at 3 o'clock. The last course, the watermelon, was not served, except to a few. After Mr. Beveridge's speech, which was nearly an hour long as one cared to return to the dining, and the management gave no opportunity for the serving of the course or for the clearing away of the dishes, and the speaking continued uninterrupted until nearly 4:30 o'clock.

Mr. Beveridge.

Mr. Beveridge said political parties come and political parties go, but the nation goes on forever, and it is that

ANOTHER GIFT TO SHILOH.

Rev. Frank Rector Preaches and Presents Resolutions of Baptist Conference.

At the anniversary services at the Shiloh Baptist Church Wednesday evening Rev. Frank Rector, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist Church of Pawtucket and president of the Rhode Island State Baptist Convention was the preacher, taking as his theme the four men bringing the palsied man to Christ, and urging the need of co-operation of the churches and others interested in the work for humanity and for Christ. Dr. Rector brought with him the resolutions adopted by the Providence Baptist Ministers' Conference June 30. The resolutions are as follows:

"At the regular meeting of the Providence Baptist Ministers' Conference, held June 30, 1913, it was voted that Rev. Frank Rector be authorized to bear to the Shiloh Baptist Church of Newport, R. I., the following resolutions:

"Whereas, our Brother, Rev. Henry N. Jeter, D. D., has served the Shiloh Baptist Church, Newport, in a continuous pastorate of thirty-eight years.

"Resolved, That we express our appreciation of the long and valued service of the pastor and that we extend our congratulations to both the pastor and the church;

"Resolved, That our best wishes and prayers shall follow them that the Lord's blessing may attend them in the future;

"Resolved, That Rev. Frank Rector, D. D., be requested to attend the forty-ninth anniversary of the founding of the church, to be held in Newport, from June 22nd to July 4th, 1913, to convey greetings.

"Geo. W. Kinney, Chairman,
"A. S. Putnam, Secretary."

The anniversary meetings will be continued this evening, when the choir of the church will give a concert assisted by local musical talent. The anniversary celebration will be closed tomorrow evening with a reunion and reception of members of the church and congregation.

Among the recent contributions towards the extinguishing of the church debt is a check of $25 from Mrs. David King, which was sent with "best wishes."

PRICE OF ICE MUST BE RAISED.

Manager Contends That It Is Scarce and Cannot be Sold for Less.

Rates for Cab Hire, Fire Apparatus at the Beach and Billboards Before the Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen held a session lasting two hours and a half Wednesday evening, and generally listened to some one else talking. It was a warm night, but the board met in the aldermanic chamber, where a cooling breeze was felt at times and there was some air. The matters of cab drivers over-charging the public, of the monopoly of the ice company, of giving the Beach Association a piece of fire apparatus at the city's expense, of paying bills for construction before they are due, of billboards and other things all received consideration. Mr. Thomas Hayes of the Newport Ice Company was present to speak for his company and spoke well, and he evidently knew what he was talking about. All the members were present.

The regular pay rolls were approved for the following amounts: Streets and highways, $2,382.04; police, $1,-034.03; fire department, $565.24; city officers, $279.27; firemen in theatres, $48.

Bills of Fagan & Kelly for extra work at the beach, $8.61; of Thomas McCarthy, $2, on election account; of Timothy Tierney, $10.50; for th playground account; of J. J. Butler, $15, for the Easton burial ground, were all approved.

Two bills for beach work, the balance held up under contract, were brought forward by request and there was talk about paying them. The mayor explained that city contracts provide that the 20 per cent held over on each should be payable 63 days after the work is approved. This is because a mechanic's lien can be put on the work within 60 days and this is done to protect the city. The bills were laid over.

Alderman Kelly suggested that the aldermen should visit the beach to inspect the board walk, the bath houses and the hot salt water baths, which are completed, and formally take action on them; also, that the city solicitor should draw up the agreement with Contractor Beeson in regard to the painting, so that the contractor could have some of his money. The Fourth of July was suggested, but the members of the Fourth of July committee would be too busy on that day, so Sunday morning at 11:30 was decided upon.

Chief Kirwin had a proposition, and as he was in a hurry to leave he came next. He said that at the request of the management he had placed one of the chemical companies at the beach, to protect the place for the night. He thought it would be a good thing to assemble a skeleton chemical for the beach. He had a 50-gallon chemical tank which he could put on the running gear of No. 7 hose reel, which had been condemned. This would make a chemical which could be handled about the beach and used by the employes, and would go a long way toward stopping a fire until other apparatus could arrive. The cost would be less than $100.

Mr. Leddy thought it would be a good idea. Mr. Kirby suggested that the cost of the changes be met by the Beach Association, and the mayor said that if the Association paid any money it would probably claim the apparatus. He thought, in view of the act that the city is very much under-insured, that any action which can be taken to protect the city property should be taken. Mr. Kelly asked if it was proposed to take the tank from the exercise wagon and the chief said yes. Mr. Hughes asked if the board had the right to do this and the mayor said it could, just as it might take advantage of an offer from a citizen to house fire apparatus where it had no suitable house. It was finally voted to allow the chief to do what he proposed.

The bill of the Newport Hospital for $332.40, for care of patients sent there by the Board of Health, was approved.

The case against John Foster, cab driver, brought by the superintendent of hacks, came next. Mr. Foster, a colored driver for George Jenkins, was present and had his story to tell. He charged a dollar when passengers desired the carriage for themselves and did not care to wait for him to try to find more, but his description of how he did this showed that he did not care to secure any more passengers. It was decided that he had no right to charge more than 50 cents unless the passenger demands the sole use of the carriage and agrees to pay for it. The fact that Foster had done wrong he agreed to himself, for he turned over 50 cents, what he claimed was a tip, to Sergeant Schnei-
